DEMOCRATS IN HOUSE EXPECT TO CUT COSTS

SEEK CURTAILMENT OF GOVERNMENTAL ACTIVITIES

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)Determined to reduce governmental costs, the Democrats today pushed to the house doors their proposal for a special economy committee to force a curtailment of federal activities.

Meanwhile, they received an unexpected setback when their army and navy consolidation bill was bogged down in the expenditures committee.

Following the party policy of working toward a balanced budget by 1933 through slashes in appropriations and increased taxes, the party leaders expect to be in position to recommend abolition and consolidation of certain government agencies by April 15.

Plan Further Study

The Douglas resolution authorizing Speaker Garner to establish a special committee of seven to work with the appropriations and expenditures groups in formulating the reduction program was approved today by the house rules committee.

Republican committee members maintained the survey should be made by a point congressional group. Chairman Pou plans to bring the resolution up for final house action next week.

Favorable action, expected today on the Byrns bill to merge the war and navy departments, and effect a $100,000,000 yearly saving, failed to materialize in the expenditures committee. A sub-committee was ordered to make a further study of the proposal in view of claims that it ran counter to existing law.

Rep. Howard Hits "Gag Rule" Method

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)—A veteran Democratic house member—Howard of Nebraska—today chided his party leaders for what he termed "gag rule" methods.

Howard told of his ten-year protest against such tactics and said:

"I won't stultify myself by remaining silent when the procedure practiced by the Mellonites is followed by the Democrats.

"I don't know who is responsible, but I know that that magnificent speaker of yours and mine sitting there has nothing to do with it," he continued, as laughter on both sides greeted the remark.

"The speaker had protested on many occasions against the 'gag rule.' He protested against the ways and means committee methods last session."

Unrest Prevails In Dartmoor Prison

Princetown, England, Feb. 20 (AP)—Dartmoor prison, where mutiny broke out recently among dangerous convicts, was seething with unrest tonight.

Fifty ringleaders of the mutiny, who are kept in solitary confinement with three empty cells separating them from each other, raised a pandemonium of shouts, curses and banging of their cells.

The uproar had occurred for several nights, arousing the villagers of this nearby place. They were greatly alarmed last night, but the authorities said they were ready for any eventuality. Police and troops were available if needed.

Mystery of Death of Boston Society Girl Aboard Ship Deepens

Boston, Feb. 20. (AP)—The mystery of the death of Elizabeth Barrett Cook, Boston society girl, aboard a freighter in the Mediterranean was deepened today with the arrival of the ship, instead of being solved.

One of the five remaining passengers on the steamship Chinese Prince revealed that besides the hoaxed cablegram announcing the death at Boston of her fiance, St. George Arnold, electrical engineer, about which the mystery thus far has centered, Miss Cook received a second cablegram. That was a highlight of the day.

The second development was a conference at the office of the British consul general attended by Captain Howard Uncles, captain of the steamer, Arnold, steamship officials, several attorneys and Miss Cook's uncle, Albert Carroll. It terminated in silence by all concerned.

Signed "Helen James"

Captain Uncles gave the cablegrams in his possession to the British consul who in turn gave copies to the attorneys.

Neither Arnold nor his attorney, Edmund L. Twomey, would talk for publication although since Miss Cook's death, the 26-year-old electrical engineer frequently said he was only waiting to see the cablegram to initiate a search for its fictitious sender.

The message, presumably the first Miss Cook received, was signed "Helen James" and urged her not to return to this country under any conditions. She was then aboard the Chinese Prince in the harbor of Naples, on the eve of sailing for Boston where she and Arnold were to have wed. That was on Feb. 4. Shortly after while the Chinese Prince was between Naples and Gibraltar, she was taken ill and died of what was then diagnosed of pneumonia.

Later with the reported discovery of a bottle of ether and a quantity of sleeping tablets in her rooms the British authorities opened an investigation. Miss Cook was buried at Gibraltar.

The five passengers who were brought to Boston today on the Chinese Prince were in practical agreement that Miss Cook had been a normal person during the few hours they knew her and all were of the opinion she had died of pneumonia.

Miss Myrtle Eileen Shivesly of Grover Hill, Ohio, an American tourist, who sought to aid her fellow traveler in her last hours, told a story of a cheerful and carefree girl who was suddenly stricken with what appeared to be a heavy cold. She saw no sign of poison nor smelled any ether in Miss Cook's cabin, she said.

Minor Politician Killed In Chicago

Chicago, Feb. 20 (AP)—Joseph Morris, 45, minor political figure, was fatally beaten and shot today and his body stuffed into a barrel which was tossed upon a deserted lot.

Boys who found the body recalled seeing an automobile pull away from the spot several hours before. Coroner's physicians said Morris had been dead about three hours, a sister identified the victim and said he "worked at the city hall."

Investigators linked the slaying with that of Abe Cooper another minor politician in the same district, two months ago. They theorized a dispute over gambling privileges in the district might have led to Morris' slaying.

He was unable to locate the bodies, which later were recovered by police.

Double Inquest In Shooting Of Trapper

Aklavik, N. W. T., Feb. 20 (AP)—A double inquest today marked the end of one of the most spectacular criminal hunts in the history of the Royal Canadian Northwest Mounted.

Johnson was killed Wednesday after a long pursuit over the frozen wastes of the Arctic northwest.

Another jury decided that Constable E. Millen, a victim of Johnson's sharpshooting, "died while performing his duty."

Staff Sergeant Hersey, wounded at Johnson's last stand, was recovering.

The purpose of the search was to find signaling apparatus which the marines charged, the Japanese had been using despite the fact that they were in an American sector. In describing the search as unnecessarily thorough, the Japanese said the marines invaded the ladies bath, which was occupied at the time.

HOOVER WILL FILE NAME IN OHIO PRIMARY

MAKES FIRST OPEN MOVE TO SEEK REELECTION

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)—An assurance that President Hoover's name will be entered in the Ohio primaries today came from the White House as the first open battle move of the chief executive's renomination campaign.

Postmaster General Brown, groomed as the campaign chairman of the Republican national committee, made known the president's decision. Just returned from a reconnaissance of conditions in Ohio—his home state—Brown reported political pointers favorable for his filing.

Squarely in Race

Brown's statement, delivered at a protracted luncheon conference and coupled with another by R. B. Creager, Republican national committeeman from Texas, broke the outward political quiet that has prevailed at the White House recently. A statement was issued some time ago that the president was not concerning himself with "personal politics," but was concentrating on his economic program.

The Texas committeeman was less optimistic than the postmaster general. He said he informed the president that unless the Democrats do "certain things" the Republicans cannot rightly expect to claim the loan star state. It was learned authoritatively that Creager referred to the possible candidacy of Alfred E. Smith.

Although the president's decision to allow his name to be used in Ohio was not a surprise, it was the first definite word of the move. The step will place him squarely in the race, since Ohio laws require that a candidate signify in writing that his hat is in the ring.

Fianna Fail, 63.
Labor, 9.
Government, 49.
Independents, 17.

Returns were still to come from Donegal, which in the past has been for Cosgrave; from the national university and from counties Sligo and Leitrim. The national university election will be held on Monday and the others on March 3.

Germany's Greatest Figure Faces Supreme Test Of Long Career in Coming Election

This is the first of six exclusive stories on President Paul von Hindenburg, Germany's greatest modern figure, who is now a candidate for a second term in the national election to be held in Germany on Sunday, March 13.—The Editor.

Berlin, Feb. 20—"First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his countrymen!"

Just as for more than 100 years childish voices in America's public schools have chanted this praise of George Washington, so, perhaps, one hundred years from now little German boys and girls will be saying the same thing about Paul Ludwig Hans Anton von Hindenburg.

He was first in war, as field marshal and commander-in-chief of Germany's armies in the great conflict that seared the world.

He has been first in peace, as president of the German Republic the nation's trying years since 1925.

Whether he will be first in the hearts of his countrymen is on the knees of the gods.

The sealed verdict that will decide this is being written now as Germany prepares to go to the polls for another presidential election in which he is a candidate to succeed himself. The election is scheduled for March 13.

Hindenburg, an ex-monarchist running for the presidency at the earnest behest of German Republicans, looks to this election for his vindication at the hands of his people. He is opposed by the aggressive Hitlerites and the Communists, each of whom has sought to wrest his power from

16 Charged With Plot To Seize Government By Murdering Officers

Edinburg, Tex., Feb. 20 (AP)—The days of six-gun government along the Texas border were remembered tonight while sixteen citizens of the little town of Donna stood accused of planning to seize control there by a wholesale killing of Democratic office holders.

And, as in the days of long ago, it was the Texas Rangers who rode into the center of trouble to quiet things. Ranger Captains Frank Hamer and A. R. Mace arrested eight men, all members of the "good government party" and charged them with conspiracy to commit murder. Eight others were sought.

The rangers said three of the accused have admitted plotting the hired slaying of six Democratic office holders. Their death reputedly was to be followed by seizure of the city administration of Donna, Texas, and the Donna water district.

Hired a Mexican

George W. Ruthven, Luther Lepley and Stokes Cheney were declared by the state law enforcement officers to have made statements admitted participation in the plot.

Others held in neighboring Starr county on the conspiracy charges are W. H. McClelland, former Donna city commissioner; Walter Van Allen and A. F. Dargel, farmers, and L. E. Schultz and E. J. Farnsworth.

McClelland, Van Allen and Dargel were released on $1,500 bond each. They had been held with the other gve men under arrest in the Starr county jail in Rio Grande City.

The rangers, headed by Captains Frank Hamer and A. R. Mace, said an unnamed Mexican had been hired to kill Walter Weaver and T. W. Hooks at Rio Grande City today. Weaver, counsel for the water district, and Hooks, leader in the "Democrat" faction, allegedly were to be shot in a fake holdup.

The men, who have oil interests in Rio Grande City, were expected to go there with a payroll for oil field workers.

If an attempt was made to revenge the slaying of Hooks and Weaver, four other men were slated for assassination, it was asserted.

The four were named as Harry Ridgeway, manager of the water district; Bill McReynolds, tax assessor; Huey Todd, ditch rider; and his brother, L. E. Todd, candidate for mayor of Donna in an April election.

Political bitterness has long been manifest in Hidalgo county, which borders Mexico to the south. The "good government league" supporters have opposed the regular [illegible]crats, originally headed by the late Sheriff A. Y. Baker.

U. S. Not Asked To Attend Session On Sino-Japanese War

Geneva, Switzerland, Feb. 20 (AP)—Hugh S. Gibson, acting head of the American delegation to the disarmament conference, tonight denied published reports that the United States had been invited to participate in the League of Nations assembly meeting on March 3 called to adjudicate China's case against Japan.

He never had been approached, he said, with such an invitation, which would have to pass through his hands. Furthermore, the league headquarters denied the question of inviting America to participate had even been discussed.

The Russian delegation, which also was reported to have been asked to attend the assembly session, said there was no truth in that report.

Federal Agents In Flint Seize Stills

Flint, Mich., Feb. 20 (AP)—Two stills which officers said comprised the largest distillery equipment ever seized in Flint were taken here this afternoon in raids by federal prohibition agents, assisted by deputy sheriffs. The raids were made in two large houses in a real estate subdivision adjoining a fashionable residential section near the Flint golf club on the south side of the city. In one house the agents found a whisky still with a capacity of 500 gallons daily and in the other was a still of 150 gallon capacity for cooking alcohol. There was 1500 gallons of mash in each house. A large quantity of whisky and alcohol also was seized, together with sugar, charcoal and other equipment including large numbers of cans used in delivering the finished product.

Two suspects were arrested but their names were not divulged.

Battle Over Pie Ends With Death

Paragould, Ark., Feb. 20 (AP)—Rivalry of two bidders for the choice pie Miss Edna Morten baked and placed on the auction block at an old fashioned pie supper near here sent John Higgins to his death in a fist fight.

The supper was held last night in a country schoolhouse. When the pie of Miss Morten, a popular girl of the community, was offered to the highest bidder, Higgens and Mack Jones bid 30 cents. Higgins raised to 50 cents and Jones boosted it to 60. Then the fight started.

They fought without weapons but Higgins' skull was fractured and he died soon afterwards. Jones was imprisoned.

Army Flier Dies In Airplane Crash

Hagerstown, Md., Feb. 20 (AP)—Lieutenant Charles Pugh, of the first pursuit squadron, Bolling Field, was killed instantly today when his small pursuit plane dived from a height of 100 feet as he sought to land at the Hagerstown airport.

Spectators at the field said the ship, a Boeing pursuit plane, seemed to fall apart as the pilot sought to bring it out of a slow roll into which it went as he maneuvered for a landing. One of the wings fell away, they said, and the ship dived nose down, landing in a clump of trees just at the side of the airport.

Lieutenant Pugh, who was alone in the plane, was dead when attendants at the airfield reached the wreckage. The flier was 27 and a native of Washington.

Shanghai, Feb. 21 (Sunday)—Japanese guns bombarded the Chinese front from Chapei to Woosung today in the second phase of their big offensive aimed to batter the defenders' line asunder at its middle near Kiangwan.

The climax to a night of continual battle was a Japanese tank attack on the Chinese positions at Kiangwan. A fleet of tanks—"crawling dragons," the Chinese call them—led a column of Japanese soldiers into action at daybreak.

Over at Woosung the battered guns of the Chinese forts which the Japanese thought they had pounded into scrap iron came to life and shelled the Japanese fleet lying in the Whangpoo river. The warships sent back as good as they got, firing repeated broadsides with their heaviest guns.

Heavy Bombardment

The Chinese positions in Chapei were ripped and blasted early this morning as the Japanese, successful yesterday in straightening out their lines all the way from Chapei to Woosung, swept down on Chapei from the rear.

Then the ear-splitting bombardment along the battlefront

TINKHAM DENIES IMMUNITY PLEA

Congressmen Argue Over His Charge Against Bishop Cannon

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)—Representative Tinkham (R. Mass.) today denied he had pleaded congressional immunity in responding to a libel suit filed by Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church, south.

For a third successive day, the house heard a heated discussion of the legal proceedings arising from Tinkham's public statement that the clergyman was a "shameless violator of the federal corrupt practises act" and Bishop Cannon's ensuing $500,000 libel suit.

Tinkham on Thursday challenged the churchman to a court test of the case and yesterday Representative Blanton (D., Tex.) contended Tinkham had pleaded congressional immunity in answer to the libel charges. Tinkham and Blanton were the principals in today's spirited discussion.

Michener Interrupts

For fifteen minutes they stood a few feet apart—questioning and cross-questioning—repeatedly drawing applause from the house. Once there was an interruption from Representative Michener, R. Mich.).

After Blanton had advanced down the aisle to a spot right underneath the speaker, Michener asked:

"Is it permissible for the witness to leave the stand and the cross-examining attorney to approach within striking distance of the witness?"

Today's discussion largely was on whether Tinkham had pleaded congressional immunity as reported at the time his attorney answered the suit of Cannon.

man of the committee on public information during the war. He was one of the "dollar a year" men.

Both Byoir and his associate director, Mark E. McKee, have relinquished temporarily their numerous business duties to devote their entire attention to the job-getting campaign.

Backed by Hoover

McKee, vice president of the Chicago, Springfield and St. Louis railroad, director of the Greyhound bus lines and owner of the largest coarse sand company in the world, holds daily conferences with the 11 division heads of the headquarters staff.

On his shoulders rests the responsibility of running the machine that Byoir, the organizer, assembles. Byoir owns a chain of 1,700 hardware stores, published the Havana Post and Telegram and three South American papers, owns Associated Laboratories, Inc., and is president of Carl Byoir and Associates, Inc.

He is credited with having conceived the idea that resulted in the campaign. The American Legion had a somewhat similar idea and they joined forces with the American Federation of Labor. The Association of National Advertisers and the Legion Auxiliary to carry it out.

The campaign was endorsed by President Hoover and hailed by the Advertisers' Association as the one practical plan among hundreds of idealistic suggestions.

Today, an army of more than 5,000,000 canvassers are combing the country for jobs, that the roster of unemployed may be reduced.

Numerous church and fraternal organizations are cooperating in the campaign.

UNDERWOOD TO GO ON TRIAL

probe conducted throughout the eastern part of the peninsula by Judge Lester S. Moll of Detroit, will be refused dealers' and breeders' licenses, Thorson stated, and will not hereafter be able to operate under a permit from the state.

A change in checking and recording methods will also be made so that local conservation officials will handle all fur shipment permits and thus be able to tell at all times who is shipping furs and where they are going.

Thorson Pleased

Thorson stated that he is pleased with the results of the fur probe and believes that it has placed the conditions which he has long known to exist before the public and also proven to the Lansing office the necessity of using unknown wardens to work in the fur country in order to keep a check on poaching.

"I have known for a long time that a lot of fur was being lost to the peninsula," the warden stated, "and have reported the same to the Lansing office. I have told them that only a stranger could catch the trapper and the dealer. This probe proved it. It also brought to light many instances of violation of which we had no suspicion. I believe that, with the aroused public interest, and the support of the attorney general's office, we can do a better piece of inforcement than has been done."

A statement is expected to be given out soon from Assistant Attorney General Edward Bilitzke who conducted the investigation for the state. Just what this statement will contain is not yet known but it is believed that recommendations will be made as to new laws or changes in the old ones to make the penalty more in keeping with the case.

A district meeting will be held within a short time in Newberry when the reorganization of the wardens will take place. Thorson reports that no changes have been made in the upper peninsula conservation personnel and that as far as he knows none of importance will be made. New badges were issued to all district supervisors and their assistants at the Lansing meeting.

Stately Pageant Will Feature Celebration Of Washington's Birth

BY BESS FURMAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)—On Capitol Hill, a site George Washington selected for great events, the stateliest pagentary a nation can offer in honor of its founder will be displayed Monday to inaugurate the bicentennial celebration of his birth.

Senate and house will be joint hosts in this impressive commemorative ceremony, but all branches of the government that Washington envisaged will participate.

The commemorative program will be all that a founder could ask in dignity and patriotism, with "America" to begin it and "The Star Spangled Banner" to end it—and an address by President Hoover in between. Representative Woodrum of Washington's state—Virginia — will read the concurrent commemorative resolution adopted by both houses.

Hoover in Ceremony

Advance guard of the throngs of millions expected before the commemorative program ends Thanksgiving Day, hundreds of visitors strolled capital streets today, ready to take part in pre-opening ceremonies tomorrow.

President Hoover will journey tomorrow morning to Alexandira, Va., to attend services in old Christ church there, seated in the pew Washington occupied. Mrs. Hoover will accompany him.

After the congressional commemoration and luncheon, President Hoover and members of the national and District of Columbia bicentennial commissions will go to Mount Vernon to put a wreath at Washington's tomb.

Enroute, they will stop at Alexandria to review a parade and pageant sponsored by that city's commission.

Vice President Curtis and Mrs. Dolly Gann, his sister, Speaker and Mrs. Garner, members of the cabinet and their wives, will accompany the chief executive.

After placing the wreath, he will make a brief address from the veranda of the Mount Vernon mansion to school teachers and educational authorities grouped on the broad lawn that stretches down to the Potomac.

Later the President and Mrs. Hoover will greet the regents of Mount Vernon inside the mansion.

As the last official act of the day, the president at 5:56 p. m. will press a button in the White House opening the new George Washington Memorial Bridge across Lake Union at Seattle, Washington.

Sale Of Wife To Bachelor Charged Against Husband

Mineola, N. Y., Feb. 20, (AP)—Sale of his young wife to a lonely bachelor for $5,000 was charged today against Frank Formico, 40, of Roslyn.

Assistant District Attorney Richard H. Brown told the story after the wife, Mrs. Anna Formica, 29, had been indicted for bigamy and her husband for aiding abetting her.

"Anthony Solemito, a 49-year-old bachelor, met Formico three months ago," Brown said, "and explained he had considerable property and thought it was about time he married.

"Formico asked him what sort of a wife he sought. Solemito, by some strange coincidence—although he had never seen Mrs. Formico and did not know his newly-found friend was married—described Mrs. Formico almost exactly.

"A few days later Formico introduced Solemito to a plump brunette who, he said, was 'Miss Formico, my cousin.' Actually she was his wife.

"The courtship was rapid and Formico was a witness at the wedding. In gratitude Solemito deeded over $5,000 in property to Formico and invited him to become a boarder in the newlyweds' home. Formico accepted.

"The three lived together in the same house for two months. Then Solemito reported to police his wife and her star boarder had disappeared. An investigation disclosed how Solemito had been duped.

Political Convicts Will Get Freedom

Buenos Aires, Feb. 20 (AP)—All political prisoners of Argentina were ordered freed and exiles authorized to return in safety as the provisional government of Lieutenand General Jose Uriburu retired today with the induction of President-elect Augustin P. Justo.

There was popular exuberance at the lifting, with the inauguration of a constitutionally elected president, of the military hand, which had gripped Argentina since the revolution of 1930. Exiles already have begun streaming homeward and many of them were prominent in the throngs that lined the streets for the inaugural ceremonies.

Y., Feb. 20 (AP)—Tying up two of the current national problems, prohibition and the economic situation, Governor Roosevelt tonight asserted in a speech here that state control of liquor would solve one, and at the same time provide ample revenue for state governments that desired to license the distribution of intoxicants.

Demos In Oklahoma Push "Alfalfa Bill"

Oklahoma City, Feb. 20 (AP)—Governor William H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray was named as a candidate for the presidential nomination by Oklahoma Democrats today.

In a solemn speech he earlier told cheering delegates to the state party convention he had no desire for the presidency but would run for the nomination if the demand became "strong enough" in various states.

The governor was named to head the Oklahoma delegation to the national convention and empowered to select the delegates accompanying him. The delegation with a total of 22 votes will be bound by the unit rule and was instructed to vote for Murray "as long as he has a chance" on the nomination.

Browne Plans to Fly to Argentina

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—Nate C. Browne, former army flier, took off from here today for old Orchard Beach, Me., the hopping-off point for his projected non-stop flight in Buenos Aires.

Although Browne has shrouded his plans in secrecy, it is known he is out to break the distance flight record of 5,039.5 miles set last summer by Russell Boardman and John Polando on their hop from New York to Istanbul, Turkey.

The point-to-point distance from Old Orchard to Buenos Aires is 5,400 miles. This is all Browne will get credit for, if he reaches the Argentine seaport, although he will probably fly nearly 6,000 miles in getting there.

Alleged Racketeer Pleads Not Guilty

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 20 (AP)—John Salimone of Flint, co-defendent with Albert Vergo in a conspiracy case charging violation of the prohibition law, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Federal Judge Arthur J. Tuttle here Saturday. He was remanded to the Bay county jail in default of $2,000 bail.

PLAN FREEDOM FOR FILIPINOS

But Independence Would Not Be Granted for 19 Years

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)—Independence for the Philippines in about 19 years is the object of a bill to be drawn next week by the senate territories committee.

The basic principles of the measure were agreed upon in an executive session of the committee today after compromises had been reached on provisions of the Hawes-Cutting and Vandenberg and King bills. Drafting the legislation will be started next Wednesday.

With the Hawes-Cutting measure as a base, the bill will provide for an island plebscite at the end of 15 years dating from the adoption of a constitution.

Meanwhile, Philippine imports to the United States, now duty free, would be limited for ten years to present totals and full duty applied to the excess.

Graduate Tariff

Immigration into the United States also would be restricted during the trial period but the committee has yet to fix a quota.

For the last five years preceding the plebescite on independence there would be graduated tariff increases on all shipments to the United States. These would be reciprocal, applying also to American exports to the islands.

The committee disapproved the proposal to make the tariff changes all at once rather than by what Chairman Bingham of the committee called graduated "step-ups."

The bill could not become a law until it had the approval of the Philippine legislature or a convention called especially to consider it. Complete independence would depend on the result of the plebiscite.

"This would put independence away about 19 years," said Senator Bingham. He figured at least four years for action by the island legislature or convention and framing of a constitution.

Advocates Purchase Of Mount Vernon

Washington, Feb. 20 (AP)—Purchase of Mount Vernon by the government was advocated today in a bill introduced by Representative Treadway (R., Mass.), on the eve of the bicentennial observance of the birth of George Washington.

A national shrine would be made from the beautiful Colonial estate under the measure submitted by him, which would authorize the secretary of the interior to negotiate with the Mount Vernon Ladies Association of the Union, present owners of the Washington home.

Professor Buried Under Snowslide

Tacoma, Wash., Feb. 20 (AP)—Prof. Richard Pierce, architectural instructor at the University of Washington, was buried by a snowslide which hurtled down from Mazama Ridge into Paradise Valley late today.

His four companions of a hiking trip expressed the opinion he was killed by the tons of rock and snow. They narrowly escaped with their lives.

The other men, Leroy Limes, Charles McDonald, Palmer Koom, and an unidentified companoin, were also caught by the slide, but fought their way clear. They were at the edge of the avalanche.

TANK ATTACK AT KIANGWAN LEADS ACTION

subsided, although an occasional boom revealed that the gunners were standing by. A heavy smoke pall spread over the zone with the usual morning fog that rolled in over Shanghai.

Observers said the lines around Kiangwan apparently had not changed since the Japanese arrived on the outskirts of that town Saturday.

Japanese naval officers aboard the flagship Idzumo said the Japs had not yet occupied Kiangwan, although they said Japanese forces "controlled it." The Japanese troops hedged in the town on the north, south and east, headquarters said, but had not entered Kiangwan, where Chinese machine gunners and snipers kept up a running fire.

Chinese said three of the Japanese tanks that started crawling from the Kiangwan racetrack, with the infantry following up, at daybreak had been badly damaged by Chinese mines, but this was denied by the Japanese.

The racecourse had fallen within the Japanese lines in the advance yesterday. Japanese field guns were moved up during the night and went into action this morning.

The Japanese command had confidently predicted that once they cracked the Chinese from their positions in Woosung village and from the Woosung forts, where the Chinese flag still fluttered, and another action to smash the Chinese strongholds in Chapei.

Chinese Retaliate

The Japanese had no monopoly on artillery action when the fighting was resumed this morning. Frequent bursts of light from the Chinese gun positions in Chapei, followed by reverberating roars, seemingly proved false the recent reports to the effect that the Chinese were dangerously low on ammunition.

In the deluge of shells laid down by the Japanese when they go into action again this morning it seemed that no living thing could survive. Reports from the front told of hundreds of Chinese dead in their trenches.

The spectacle of battle was witnessed by Nelson P. Johnson, United States minister to China, from a ringside seat on the roof of a cotton mill near the settlement boundary.

Columns of black smoke poured up from the ruins of numerous Chinese villages strung along the line from Chapei to Woosung, geysers of flame told of occasional direct hits on ammunition dumps.

In straightening out their line from Chapei to Woosung during Saturday's fighting the Japanese pushed ahead from one to two and a half miles, but the advance was carried out with a minimum of bayonet work.

The artillery preparation for this movement was of surprising proportions. Almost continual airplane scouting for several days had provided the Japanese gunners with accurate information on the positions of the Chinese reserves.

For the most part they encountered only passive resistance.

By sundown the attackers were on the outskirts of Kiangwan where they dug in.

On the right and left flank the advance was negotiated with a minimum of opposition. The Japanese gobbled up the village of Miau Hang Chan, north of Kiangwan, without difficulty, and the village of Mang Zah Ka also was easy for them.

Woosung village, where the Chinese had built strong trench positions to protect the rear of the Woosung forts, was a furnace this morning. All day Monday six Japanese destroyers shuttled back and forth along the Woosung river front, their guns streaming shells into the forts and the Chinese emplacements behind.

Seven Japanese planes circled above the Woosung area, keeping the warships on the range. The purpose of the action at this end of the line apparently was to keep the Chinese occupied. Only a few Japanese infantrymen remained in the trenches along the western bank of Woosung creek.

A few hours after the offensive was launched Saturday morning the funeral procession for two British sailors, killed by shellfire last Wednesday, passed through the streets of Shanghai.

Approximately 1,500 persons were in the procession, and among them were the British, American and French ministers to China as well as British consular officials in full uniform. There were detachments of marines and sailors, and numerous officers of the Saanghai foreign garrisons.

The music of a military band was heard against a background of booming guns and bursting shells as the funeral moved toward the cathedral. Japanese airplanes circled over nearby Chapei.

TARDIEU FORMS NEW CABINET

national defense under Francois Pietri, former budget minister.

The remainder of the cabinet is:

Paul Reynaud, vice premier justice.

Albert Mahieu, interior.

Pierre-Etienne Flandin, budget and finance.

The new cabinet has eight members who were in the Laval cabinet. It is predominantly a government of the center right, with no socialists or radical socialists represented.

M. Tardieu, who was minister of war in the late Laval government, and France's spokesman at the world disarmament conference in Geneva, said he hoped to return to Geneva Wednesday.

Convicted Murderer Sentenced To Life

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 20 (AP)—A verdict of guilty with recommendations for a life sentence was returned by a jury tonight against Don Pearce of Pine Bluff, on a charge of slaying J. E. Chapple, cashier of the Arkansas Gazette, during a payroll holdup of the newspaper office a moth ago.

The jury was otu about an hour.

Don Pearce was accused of staging the holdup during which Chappele was fatally wounded when he grappled with the robber.

BANDIT KILLED DURING HOLDUP

"Tough Guys" Cornered By Police, Two Make Escape

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—Three bandits who boasted they were "out to get some big money and kill a cop or two" were cornered by police, who killed one of them while the other two escaped.

The trio walked into an uptown garage at dawn and lined three washers and two chauffeurs against a wall.

They got $14.

"Fourteen dollars? Give it back to 'em," shouted the bandit with the two guns. "We don't want any of this small town stuff."

The money was thrown at the five men lined up against the wall.

In the center of the garage was a new sedan.

"Let's have that car," said one of the bandits.

As they departed the leader of the gang shouted over his shoulder:

"We're going to get big money and kill a cop; maybe two cops."

They held up the Broadway restaurant of Chris Claidkis and escaped with $175.

Police searching for the stolen car found it an hour later in front of another restaurant just off Broadway.

Detective Timothy Crimmins stalked into the restaurant, revolver in hand. Three customers were huddled against a wall. A bandit stood in the middle of the place, pistol in hand.

"Where are you going?" he demanded of Crimmins.

The detective's gun gave answer. The bandit backed toward the kitchen, firing as he went. Patrolman Terrence McDermott joined in the pistol duel. Then the other two bandits who had secreted themselves in the entrance to the restaurant, began to fire.

A bullet struck McDermott in the arm. A second smashed the trigger finger of his right hand and his weapon dropped.

The bandit in the rear of the restaurant staggered into the kitchen. The other two got into their car. The driver nervously backed into a lamp post, then started ahead.

Back at the restaurant the wounded bandit, Edward Roberts, 23, died before the arrival of an ambulance.

State Briefs

St. Louis (AP)—Fire destroyed the St. Louis high school Saturday with a loss estimated at $175,000. School had not started when the fire broke out. The origin of the fire was undetermined.

Detroit (AP)—Dr. John Harvey Kellogg, of Battle Creek, believed that the person who drinks six or eight schooners of four percent beer a day swallows twice as much alcohol as the average whisky drinker would take in four ordinary cocktails. His statement to this effect was sent Saturday to Mrs. Ford Ballantyne, chairman of the Detroit organization of the Allied Youth of America for Prohibition. Dr. Kellogg said the efforts to legalize four percent beer were "dangerous."

Lansing (AP)—Attorney General Paul W. Voorhies ruled Saturday that beer bricks and powdered malt preparations are taxable under the state malt tax law.

Grand Rapids (AP)—Prosecutor B. J. Jonkman, of Kent county, Saturday ruled that the purchase by the county of $100,000 of the so-called "calamity bonds" of the city of Grand Rapids to provide assistance in the city's financial difficulties was illegal because the bonds were purchased from the county's sinking fund.

Lansing (AP)—John Wendell Bird, prosecutor of Ingham county, Saturday qualified as a candidate for the Republican nomination for congress in the Sixth Michigan district. He will oppose the incumbent, Representative Seymour Person, of Lansing.

ACTS SIGNED UP FOR STATE FAIR

Dazzling Show Promised For Annual Event At Escanaba

Topped off by a revue which has stars from George White's "Scandals" and Al Jolson's famous "Wonder Bar", the grandstand program booked for the 1932 Upper Peninsula state fair at Escanaba gives assurance that fair patrons will receive more than ever for their money this year, according to George E. Harvey, secretary of the fair, who has just completed the signing up of entertainment for the show.

The popularity of the night show in previous years prompted the fair management to secure the "Winter Garden Revue" for the evening performance. This has everything that fair crowds are looking for in entertainment, and is certain to eclipse anything presented in the past.

The following brief description of the grandstand attractions is supplied by Mr. Harvey, who has seen many of the acts in actual presentations before audiences:

Winter Garden Revue—Groups of pretty girls, beautiful costumes, a carload of scenery and electrical effects, famous revenue stars, flashing ensemble numbers and spectacular vaudeville acts, to make each performance an alluring presentation of color, rhythm, and harmony. This group contains stars from George White's Scandals, and also Al Jolson's famous "Wonder Bar." (Night show.)

Fink's Comedy Mules, Ponies, Dogs, and Monkeys—The greatest animal act in show business, and one that is a made-to-order feature for Children's Day. Prof. Fink's police dog "Old Trusty," world famous wall-scaler, will meet all registered competitors of the same breed in open competition during the jumping exhibition.

Ben Beno—Working high in the air, blindfolded, juggling with fate, Ben Beno keeps the crowds shrieking at his hazardous balancing on a swinging trapeze. Has played in every country of the world.

Wan Wan San Troupe—Unrivaled splendor from the Far East—odd and amazing Chinese showmanship; equilibristics, conjuring, juggling, contortion; ten people.

The Florenis — Two separate shows. Daytime show — All routines performed on an extremely small revolving platform at top of a slender pedestal—the highest attainment in "team balancing." European poseurs and equilibrists. Night show — Beautiful electric fountain about which a flock of pure white pigeons circle during the artists' superb display of strength and poise.

Kirby Trio—Two different acts. No. 1—Straight, eccentric and whirlwind tumbling, novelty acrobatic routines, snappy appearance. No. 2—An explosion of comical frolics. Numerous new laughter-compelling antics. A banquet of fun for the children; a square meal of joy for the grown-ups.

Martini's Accordianas — Pleasing to eye and ear alike. Gifted musicians, trained vocalists, talented dancers. Extraordinary array of unique specialties and clever novelties puts gayety, life and beauty on the program.

Plans are to have Al Sweet, former leader of the Ringling Brothers band, act as guest conductor for the musical presentations.

Village Caucus Held at Garden

Garden, Mich., Feb. 20 (Special)—The annual village caucus held in the town hall Friday night was an exceedingly quiet affair, in spite of the fact that so much interest is centering on the township caucus to be held in the near future. Charles Olmstead was chairman of the caucus, with Aristide Thibault as secretary and Ran Casper and Ulysses Thibault, tellers.

The following nominations were made:

President, Asa Tatrow.

Clerk, Aristides Thibault.

Assessor and treasurer, Kolman Casper.

Trustees for two years, Napoleon Boudreau, Jr., Robert Lester and Henry Deloria.

Trustees already serving are Ben Casper, Joseph Duschene and Charles Olmstead.

There were five present at the caucus. The election will be held on Monday, March 14.

Fishing in the Garden district has slacked off during the past few days. Prior to that time some unusually large lifts have been taken. In fact one or two of the fishermen have stated that fishing was better than ever they had seen before. Asa Tatrow and Ossie Hazen, two Garden fishermen state that for four days their lifts of whitefish averaged about seven hundred and fifty pounds.

TO THE VOTERS

of Garden Township

I wish to announce that I will be a candidate for the office of Township Clerk at the coming caucus. Your support will be appreciated.

Grant Truckey.

Postmistress Dies in Loyal, Wisconsin, Known in Escanaba

Miss Dora Devlin, sister of James Devlin of Marinette, formerly of Escanaba, died at her home in Loyal, Wis., February 14 following an illness of several years. Miss Devlin was born in Lowell, Wis., January 20, 1878, and after having completed her education, taught school in Lowell and Loyal for several years. In 1914 she was appointed postmistress at Loyal, which position she filled until July 1929 when her failing health made it necessary for her to resign. She visited in Escanaba on several occasions and had many friends here.

Funeral services were held at Loyal Wednesday morning at the Catholic church and every business house in that place was closed during the services. Burial was in the family lot at Loyal.

The survivors are two sisters, Mrs. George Jarvis of Wausau, Wis., Miss Madeline Devlin, a teacher in the public schools in Cleveland, Ohio, one step sister Mrs. Rose Imlay of Denver, Colo., two step-brothers John Devlin of Lowell and James Devlin of Marinette.

Miss Devlin's mother died two months ago, on December 14.

PASSENGER PIGEONS?

Dear Editor:

A short time ago I saw in the Munising items in the Escanaba Daily Press an account of where different persons had seen passenger pigeons.

In my early boyhood days I shot and also assisted in netting many passenger pigeons, but I have not seen one since about the year 1878.

Several times when in the states of Florida and California I have heard of passenger pigeons. I have driven many miles to see them and always found them to be doves. I will pay one thousand dollars in gold to any person who will furnish me with one pair of genuine passenger pigeons, alive, found in the United States, leaving it to Dr. W. B. Mershonof Saginaw, Mich., the nation's recognized authority on the passenger pigeon, as to the genuineness of the said passenger pigeon.

Very truly yours,
CHARLES S. HOVEY,
Manistique, Mich.

Two-Headed Fish Are Not Unusual

Probably no other living species produce more abnormalities than fish, according to the Fish Division of the Department of Conservation. Two headed fish are not uncommonly hatched in the various stations operated by the division and instances have been cited when fish have been born with five perfect heads to a single body and tail. These fish do not generally live past the stage when artificial feeding becomes necessary. However, some of them do live to the adult stage. A few years ago a legal sized perch having two heads was caught in a lake near Cadillac.

New Licenses Must Be On Automobiles By March 1

With only six days remaining before the deadline for 1931 automobile license plates, the intervening week is expected to be a busy one at the local secretary of state branch agency as motorists come in to get their new tags for 1932. The police department is warning drivers that time is getting short, and traffic officers have been instructed to take action against the owners of cars using last year's license plates after February 29.

The licenses are being issued at Escanaba this year at the U. P. State Fair office, 110 South Ninth street. So far about 900 passenger cars and 200 commercial cars have been equipped with the 1932 tags. Last year the total motor vehicle registration for Delta county was 6,030 passenger cars, 1,132 commercial, 13 motorcycles, 481 trailers, and 15 dealers.

200 YEARS ago there was born a man child, who perchance, was to be the immediate cause of the success of America as a Nation—Flippant biographers have sought to destroy the respect and veneration of present day Americans for him—

But they have only served to increase our respect for the sterling qualities that overcame the human frailties and make us glad to know that he was, after all, another human being—

And tomorrow when the American people are paying tribute to this true and great American we hope that those who take part, will come to realize, that perhaps no admonition of his, carries quite the importance of that particular one, where in choice language he tells us as a Nation to "mind our own business"—

May some of his advice bear fruit in these days of 1932—

CONVENTIONS HELP

THE current news letter of the Escanaba Chamber of Commerce discloses that Escanaba will have its share of the conventions this year. For the first time, this city will be host to the state association of the Spanish-American War Veterans. The Upper Peninsula Dental Society, Michigan Commercial Secretaries' Association and the Older Boys' Conference are other organizations that are holding their annual meetings here. Undoubtedly, there also will be the usual number of gatherings that are arranged on shorter notice.

Conventions are worth-while attractions for a community to secure. Besides the advertising it gives to a city there is much material benefit since the delegates spend good money while here.

The convention dollar circulates very rapidly in a community. The convention dollar can afford to buy things the spender wants and it comes to the city in a spending frame of mind. It goes for hotel rooms, meals and service; to the amusement houses, to automobile supply houses, garages and repair places. A large percentage of it goes to the retail stores, where the visitors spend their convention dollars freely.

Escanaba citizens can help the Chamber of Commerce in securing conventions for this city by exerting their personal influence in organizations of which they are members. Think about Escanaba the next time you go to an out-of-town convention. Tell your organization that Escanaba has good hotels, fine stores, scenic attractions and the other accommodations for making the delegates' visit an enjoyable one. We hear a lot of talk about attracting the tourist here, but we should remember that the convention visitor is worth just as much to us.

BEST FOR LABOR

CONSTRUCTION of highways offers one of the best possible means of providing work from which labor will receive great benefit, according to a survey made by the Bureau of Public Roads.

At least 85 per cent and possibly more than 90 per cent of the money expended for concrete pavement is ultimately paid out as wages and salaries. In making the study, expenditures were traced back through various channels until the money went into personal use.

About 15 per cent of the cost of concrete pavements is paid to men employed directly on the construction jobs. About 12 per cent is paid to men employed in quarries, sand pits, mills and factories where the materials are produced, and about 14 per cent is paid to men employed by the transportation companies, principally the railroads, for hauling these materials to the jobs.

From these facts it is apparent that the construction of highways, particularly those of the higher types, not only provides work for men employed on the job but that it provides a great deal more work for men employed in industry and in transportation; and that, in addition to this, it supplies a large volume of business to those industries through which the materials that must be used are collected, worked and reworked before they become a part of a finished pavement.

From the standpoint of providing the greatest direct benefit to the men on the job, however, Escanaba's unemployment relief program in the construction of storm sewers in the north part of the city is ideal. Approximately eighty-five per cent of the sewer construction expenditure goes right into the pockets of the men, who are handling the shovels, there being very little expense for materials.

And another important angle is that practically all this money is spent right here in Escanaba in the purchase of food, clothing and the other necessities of life.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

IN THE observance of the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of George Washington on Monday the people should be heartened by the knowledge that the Father of our Country faced even more serious problems than those that trouble us now. It was indeed fortunate that the Colonies had as their leader a man of great fortitude, who could endure serious reverses and come back with renewed strength.

The winter of 1777-8 when Washington was quartered with his army at Valley Forge was a critical period in American history. His army of 11,000 soldiers suffered dire privations, many dying from exposure and starvation. Coming as it did after several unsuccessful military engagements asd the British occupation of Philadelphia, the experience at Valley Forge was the great test of Washington's career. When spring came, however, he broke camp and triumphantly re-entered Philadelphia.

The sufferings of the people in the present day of unemployment pale into insignificance when compared to those endured by Washington's soldiers at Valley Forge. There were no charitable organizations on the job in those days to see that everyone was provided with food, clothing and shelter as now. Except for the cycles of interrupting business depressions, the nation has maintained a steady march of progress. In the present crisis what is needed most is the perseverance and courage exhibited by Washington and his troops in the winter of 1777-8.

A TRIBUTE TO THE JOBLESS

ONE of the most striking features of the present depression has been the relative absence of violence on th part of unemployed workingmes. Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, touched on the point in a speech at Williamstown, Mass., the other day, and remarked:

"This depression has produced less mass demonstration, I believe, because of the recoil and actual fear of violence among the workers and the fear that such demonstrations would tie them up with the Communist theory of inevitable revolution."

That, apparently, is about the size of it; and there could not be a surer tribute to the solidity and intelligence of the American wage-earner. The American worker has not the slightest desire for a revolution. He simply wants a job, and if he has to wait a long time for it he can wait without breaking things.

ISOLATE THEM

WHILE the disarmament conference grinds along at Geneva, Europe is groaning under the burden of armament. America is paying too much for future wars. America and two-thirds of Europe is in agreement about disarmament. Every day's conference proves that. Two powers in the world are gun toters—Japan and France. France is sensitive to world opinion, Japan is not.

If the rest of Europe and America would isolate France—let her have her gun and trust to moral suasion to shame her, disarmament would be safe. France will not live in obloquy. She will throw away her gun.

And as for Japan, she could be handled easily if the world, having disarmed, refused to lend Japan money.—Emporia Gazette.

Calvin Coolidge is sued for $100,000 for some remarks he made over the radio. Maybe that's why the Sphinx never talks at all.

An eastern capitalist says that business is definitely improving. Next thing we know, they'll be telling us to use these good times to prepare for a depression.

And now they say we forced Haiti to borrow money from us. Well, they won't have that trouble again.

A Pittsburgh judge fined a woman $5 for making goo-goo eyes at him. From now on, Pittsburgh women will insist on trial by jury.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By Douglas Malloch

(Copyright 1931 by Douglas Malloch)

THE CAT AND THE MOUSE

If those who wrong us would but wrong us, then
Would give the hurt heart time to heal again,
We might forgive them, even might forget;
But those who wrong us wrong more greatly yet
The more they grieve us—as a cat at play
Pursues the mouse it first lets run away.

Yet love may learn some right from even wrong:
Wrong wrongs forever—love must love as long,
Forgive, forgive again, forgive once more,
Although each day wrong knocks upon the door
And steals away the gladness of your house
As does the cat pursue the wounded mouse.

Perhaps someday the hand of hate shall tire,
Or find itself, perhaps, some new desire,
As does the cat allow the mouse to run,
Tired of its torture, weary of its fun.
Then love its wounded body must conceal,
Yes, hide away, and leave its wounds to heal.

THE DIME-A-DANCE GIRL

(By NEA Service) BY JOAN CLAYTON

CHAPTER XVI

That evening as Ellen entered the shabby Brooklyn apartment house she felt a great peace stealing over her. The lobby was uncarpeted, the tiled floor was by no means clean, the treads of the stairs had been worn by many feet. As usual Mrs. Clancy popped open her door to see who had come in. Surely there was nothing visible here to induce happiness but the girl felt an odd lift of spirit. This was home. She had left the store behind. For 12 hours she need not think of it. She had stepped out of the ugly and complicated life she led there to return to a life of her own.

She was tired and she was coming home. She was glad even that she was not that night to see Larry Harrowgate. Tonight she wanted only Myra and her mother and baby Mike with loyal, stodgy Bert serving as a comfortable background. A leisurely supper, afterwards a bath and maybe a shampoo if she felt like it—a delightful way to spend an evening, thought Ellen.

She reached the fifth floor, unlocked the door and stepped into the Rossiter living room. She stopped at the threshold, gasped. What had happened to that beloved, familiar room? Since morning it had changed startlingly, miraculously. Everything about it had been changed. The worn carpet was gone. The floor had been polished and was covered now with summer scatter rugs. The familiar contour of the furniture was lost beneath smart slip covers in gray and orange. Curtains of the same gray and orange material fluttered at the windows. New pewter ash trays twinkled from the mantel cleared for once of Mike's school books. A new bridge lamp bloomed beside the easy chair. Everywhere were flowers.

What happened? As she ran into the dining room Ellen thought confusedly that perhaps her English grandfather had died and remembered them in his will. Perhaps the dreams that colored her childhood had at last come true.

In the dining room a colored maid polished heavy silver finger bowls. The table, decked in new linen, flaunted a centerpiece made of Steven Barclay's roses, tall and splendid in a silver vase. New rugs and curtains here, too. The maid glanced at Ellen, exposed white teeth.

"What are you doing here?" the girl demanded in astonishment.

"I wuk here."

Ellen dashed into the kitchen. The kitchen was not changed. Molly turned around from the stove and smiled at her.

"Were you surprised, honey?" she asked in a gale of merriment and high spirits.

"What in the world has happened anyhow?"

"We're giving you your chance—that's what's happened," Molly crowded. "I'd never have known how to manage but Mrs. Clancy told me how to borrow money on the insurance. I've had the most exhausting day. It took a long time to get the money and since then I've spun like a top."

"Have we both gone crazy? What are you talking about?"

"You'll see." Molly was convulsed with mysterious laughter.

From downstairs the doorbell rang imperatively. Ellen in a confused daze answered its summons.

"Go and see who it is," Molly commanded mysteriously.

As she ran back through the dining room Ellen noticed that the painting of her grandfather which had been stored since her father's death, was in place on the wall. She reached the outer door and jerked it open.

Coming up the stairs was Steven Barclay.

"I'm afraid I'm early," were Barclay's first words. "Your mother said seven."

Ellen as she stood, shabby and beautiful, in the doorway suddenly understood everything. By "her chance" Molly had meant Steven Barclay. It was not the time—thought her mother, to do her justice, could not have known that—to invite Steven Barclay as a guest. It was indeed not the place into which to introduce a millionaire. The makeshifts, so delightful to Molly, did not improve the down-at-heel apartment; they succeeded only in emphasizing the essential poverty of its occupants. But hospitality, deep rooted and instinctive, triumphed over lesser considerations in Ellen's mind.

Ellen stepped into the hall to greet her unwelcome visitor so warmly that he should never guess that he was not a welcome one. He was leaning against the balustrade exhausted by the long climb. His face was so white that for a moment Ellen feared he would faint. She had enough understanding not to mention his palpable weariness; enough understanding to keep silent until he made a gallant recovery.

"It's good of you to come," she said at last, extending her slender brown hands.

Seeing him rally his forces for a reply," she had a sudden flashing memory of Larry leaping up the stairs and shouting breathless and foolish nonsense.

"I'm glad you think so," Barclay said.

Ellen noticed then, hesitating on the landing, a uniformed chauffeur laden with florist boxes, three of them. As he caught his employer's eye he came forward.

"Oh, you shouldn't have," Ellen exclaimed helplessly. "We've so many roses now—"

She stopped suddenly.

"Yes, I know I shouldn't have," Barclay agreed. "But you've no idea how I enjoyed myself. There's a box for each of you—for your sister and your mother and the pink roses are for you."

And then they entered the living room and Molly fluttered in from the kitchen and began exclaiming over the boxes and recklessly tearing them open until the room was a carnival of color. There was a smudge of flour on her pretty, tilted nose but she was far too excited to be conscious of her appearance.

"I feel as though I don't need an introduction to you at all," she bubbled, shaking hands with the guest. "Ellen has told us so much about you."

Molly's eyes and her daughter's flashed together. Ellen did not know what to do; she felt completely helpless. What could she say? There was no denying that Barclay seemed pleased.

"Well," he was saying, "I hope they were all nice things."

"Of course they were," Ellen replied a shade stiffily.

"Darling, could you get vases for the flowers?" Molly interposed, tossing aside layers of silky paper and filling her arms with sweet, purple lilacs.

Ellen concealed her reluctance at leaving her mother and her employer together and left the room. When she returned she found Molly, her lap overflowing with flowers, chattering like mad to Barclay. She was talking about the English Rossiters. "direct connections of ours, you know." Ellen understood now the reason for the portrait in the dining room. She was both annoyed and amused at her mother's childish vanity.

Although Steven was interested, Ellen was exceeding cross. She relieved Molly of the fragrant burden and arranged the lilacs, the creamy camillias and the pink roses in the already crowded room. What would Steven Barclay think of them? Surely he could see that her mother was trying to impress him; surely he could guess the reason. Ellen was too young to know that Steven was thinking nothing of the sort. He was indeed thinking that he had never been in such a charming, such a friendly place. Molly's very wiles were too transparent to seem vicious or grasping.

"You'll just have to make yourself at home," Molly urged, rising. "We live so simply that I'm afraid I'll have to take my little girl away from you. She's the only good cook in the house."

Audaciously Molly twined her arms about Ellen and drew the girl's rigid body close. Ellen knew her mother expected her to say something pretty, something deprecatory and graceful. But she said nothing at all.

"Perhaps you'd like a magazine," Molly suggested hurriedly when Ellen's stubboirn silence was beginning to be embarrassing. Then she cried out, relieved, "But there's a key! It must be my older daughter, Myra, and her fiance. They'll keep you entertained."

Myra and Bert, dusty and hot, came through the dining room and into the living room. Both were plainly flabbergasted at Barclay's presence. There were more introductions. There were more exclamations over the flowers. There was more of Molly's ecstatic foolishness. There was more laughter.

Ellen maintained control until she reached the kitchen but when the kitchen door swung to after her and Molly she was in a state of towering rage, so angry she was incoherent. Never in her life had Ellen been so angry.

"I don't know what you're talking about," Molly said in a tone which she hoped would be bold but which was instead anxious and frightened.

"Can't you see how unfair you've been to me " cried Ellen, trying to be patient. "Youve borrowed money on our insurance which is the only thing that stands between us and complete ruin. You've put me in a false position with the man I work for. What sort of impression do you think you've given Mr. Barclay of all of us "

"He likes us, I know he does! If only you hadn't stood there like a stick and left everything to me, Ellen Rossiter, I'm ashamed of you! I thought my own daughters knew better what was due a guest."

That was Molly's way. Ellen felt again that mood of intense helplessness. She saw Molly was convinced that although she herself might have been slightly at fault, Ellen's faults far outweighed her own. Tears were gathering in the black, thick-fringed eyes. Molly would forget that she had been even slightly at fault. She would only sobbingly remember that she had given her whole life to her daughters, cruel and unappreciative daughters who never remembered what she had done for them.

"All right, mother," the girl said with a heavy sigh. "You were right and I was wrong. Let's get busy at the dinner now."

The world's biggest stamp collection is said to be that of the family of Baron P. von Ferrary, of Paris. This was begun in 1865, and has cost the owner about $2,000,000 up to date.

Exciting Events: Man Threading Needle, and Woman Driving Nail

Dear Editer:

Well where-ever I go In Barber shops or radiator clubs or window clubs and etc, I hear them talk about the new football rules which cause more excitement than the fighting of Jappan China and Dempsey

And one question you hear is how can refaree tell whether a football player is pushing another man in the face or punching him in the face because pushing is O. K. but punching is not legal

COACH OLAFSON

Well for me which was head coach at Peterson's 4 - corners when we won the Scandinavia valley champinship that would be easy to tell and some of the refarees could take a tip from my long experints and all you have to do to find out if it was a punch or push is just ask the man who was punched or pushed in the face and he will tell you and if his eye is black the chances are it was a punch and was not legal also if his nose is bloody

But one thing I do not aprove of in the new rules is how they do away with pileing up in a pile which was the only big thrill of football which make it difrent from basketball or soccer and when you see a pile like that you wonder who got the ball and it gives suspents and you wonder how many will be carried off the field and that gives suspents and when I was playing with the West Bloomfield team I always like the pileing because that give me a chanst to rest and I just fill up my lungs when I fall and hold my breth and no body could knock the wind out of me you bet and bruises are nothing when you use my Worlds Best Liminent and that is the troble with the players today they do not know how to hold their breth and get the wind kicked out of them too easy but now they got the rules fixed so you have to act like a gentelman may be they can interst the Girls in playing football and may be the Taylor Trunks will form a football team and come up and play the Esc. Rangers and I bet that will be a better game than basketball because basketball rules do not give a ladylike player a chanst

Hopping you are the same

BRITISH TAKE JERICHO

On Feb. 22, 1918, British troops in Palestine occupied Jericho after a sharp encounter with Turkish troops.

Defeat of the Turkish armies in Palestine was hailed as a great victory for the allied cause.

U. S. troops on the Western front were engaged in a severe trench raid action. They repulsed a German group, inflicting heavy casualties.

The Russian Soviet government announced "resistance unto death" against the advancing German armies, following the refusal of the Germans to accept at their word the Russian surrender.

Heavy bombardment of several sectors of the western front indicated to allied observers that Germany would soon launch a terrific attack, using many troops which had formerly been stationed on the Russian front.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE DELFT.

Ann Harding's latest starring vehicle is outstanding in many respects, all of which assure audiences who see "Prestige" at the Delft Theatre today a thoroughly enjoyable hour with this great RKO Pathe star.

As the physically frail but spiritually gigantic heroine, Ann Harding gives a superb performance. Nor has she ever appeared to greater advantage from the standpoint of photography. Her wistful loveliness has an ethereal quality, with, in many scenes, a charming suggestion of whimsical humor.

Famous Male Leads.

Debonair Adolphe Menjou and virile Melvyn Douglas prove excellent selections for the two principal roles opposite Miss Harding.

Douglas will be remembered as the young stage actor who played his first screen role opposite Gloria Swanson in "Tonight or Never." His remarkable promise in that picture is fully borne out by the exceptional work which he contributes to "Prestige." Unquestionably a new screen idol has arrived.

Music lovers have a treat in store for them also, in the work of Clarence Muse, who plays a native servant with a penchant for occasional outbursts into song. Introduced adroitly into the picture, the song sung by Muse is a native Anamese folk song written especially for the picture.

Weird, Savage Dances.

For what is said to be the first time, ceremonial dances of Indo-China, where much of the story is laid, are shown. In savagery, weird rhythm and curious interpretations these far surpass anything of this sort ever before attempted.

Peninsula Paragraphs

By Marjorie Hantoon Morrill

DRUIDS

The woods are full of druids these days and the night know them as well. Of course if one is so impractical as to be altogether practical they will be always just behind a tree, or over a hill, or hidden deep in a twiggy bush. Any one with a little common sense will know they are there and watch for them with proper pretense at indifference.

It looked, for a while, that we were going to have no snow this winter. But finally, when the winds and the earth and her atmosphere got around to it, the snow came. Good thing, too. Winter in the North Country, especially in our Peninsula, must have snow to know perfection.

The snow helps us to detect the druids and other woodsy people. The Snowflake or Snow Bunting is a little ghost of a bird belonging most truly to the family of druid-people. He walks with the most engaging stride over the icy fields and no king on his throne has more dignity than he. Then there is the Junco, slate colored as a winter sky, with flirting white tail feathers to signal as he flies. And he wears a nice little dark grey bib to keep his vest clean . . . or for some other reason.

Then the chickadee. Tumbling about, now right-side up ,now right-side down, he gives an air of humor to every tree and thicket he visits, and his trite little song is as important to him and to his mate as though he had invented the thing.

All old-fashioned people should stay out of the woods after February. No place for them. Too much going on. Too much love-making and in the most brazen manner. No English nurse-maid on top a London bus deciding that she surely must wed her young man can care as little about the rest of the world as do the wood-people.

PARDON ME!

Birds, having songs to sing,
Sing them;
There is no modesty, nor any trace
Of unbecoming guile.
But men, having gifts to bring,
Bring them
Only behind the shelter of a smile;
It is as though they mentioned,
being just,
I love, my dear, only because
I must!

"Some of the Druids were priests, some were bards who were prophets . . ." a book tells me. Sure as you were born! A wise old owl, his great eyes looking as though he had spent at least a thousand years in contemplation and would not tell anything he knew for all the world. Easy enough for him to gather together a group of followers if he could collect a soap-box and a corner . . . And he's not even interested enough to do that.

But the "bards" . . . bless their tiny souls. They tell all they know . . . and hope . . . and future is full of joy for them. Or so they think. And we, walking in the woods, hear them thrilling and lyricing, find ourselves uplifted from winter in which we have been living for the past few weeks. February woods are full of druids.

Patience Biggest Washington Weapon; He Lost Battles But Won Campaigns

As the strategy of modern military leaders appears in the news from the Far East, the military genius of George Washington again may be evaluated. In this article a noted historian sees the first President as the greatest military genius in history.

By DR. RANDOLPH G. ADAMS
Director of William L. Clements Library of American History at University of Michigan

Ann Arbor, Mich. (AP)—The word which probably best describes George Washington as a military leader is "patience."

Washington was no brilliant leader of armies like Alexander the Great or Napoleon Bonaparte.

But the proper measure of a military genius is success, and by this standard George Washington is the greatest military genius in history.

His Job Unexpected

In 1775 Washington left his home to attend the continental congress in Philadelphia. He probably expected to return soon to Mount Vernon.

Instead he was appointed commander-in-chief of the American armies and went immediately to Boston to undertake the task of driving British troops out of the united colonies. This required eight and one half years.

Have you ever stopped to think how few generals in any war ever finish what they begin?

Think of the succession of commanders who plagued Abraham Lincoln before he discovered Ulysses S. Grant.

In the world war all the great powers, save one, had to change their commanders. John J. Pershing shares with Washington the distinction among military men of finishing what he started.

Knew Power of Patience

There is one reason for Washington's success as a military leader. He knew what patience could accomplish.

Washington did not win most of his battles. In fact, he lost most of them.

But he won campaigns, and he knew what it took the British eight years to learn—that the army which holds the field at the end of a battle is not necessarily the victor.

In 1775 Washington's first job was to drive the British army out of Boston. This he accomplished under the terrific handicap of building up an army and conducting a siege at the same time.

The British left Boston, but in the following summer returned to America with the greatest army England had sent anywhere up to that time.

British Forces Superior

Washington's Americans were ill-trained, badly disciplined, badly armed and wretchedly supported by the government which was to pay them. The British were at their best.

The summer of 1776 was a succession of brilliant British victories—Long Island, the capture of New York, the battle of Harlem Heights, the capture of Fort Washington, the battle of White Plains. The British newspapers resounded with the bulletins of their successes.

But when the season was over, 35 miles was all Washington had permitted the British to gain in that spectacular summer.

Against the Rules

Then Washington caught the victorious Britons napping. By the good manners of a gentleman's war in those days you were supposed to quit fighting in winter.

The British did. Whereupon Washington turned and defeated them in the two stunning victories of Trenton and Princeton.

After the battle of Monmouth in 1778 Washington appears on the surface to have accomplished very little until the end at Yorktown. Actually he spent three years trying to get the French and Americans to cooperate after France had actually joined us. He finally succeeded.

In 1781 he marched completely around the British headquarters at New York, swooped down upon the most valiant of the British commanders, Lord Cornwallis, and captured him with his army at Yorktown.

That victory, Washington's last and greaatest, virtually ended the American revolution.

Before his task was completed Washington had worn out four British commanders-in-chief.

Yale university will combine an observance of Washington's birthday and alumni day, February 22, with an exhibition at the fine arts gallery of portraits of the first President and articles used by him and his associates. Here is a picture of Washington and his horse. It is a mezzotint by Valentine Green printed in 1785 after a painting by Charles Wilson Peale.

Auto Skids Into 2 Show Windows Saturday Morning

Two large plate glass windows were smashed early yesterday morning at Richards Bros. and Jenks Grocery stores when a car driven by Frank St. John, of this city, got beyond the driver's control, climbed the curb, and skid into the fronts of the buildings.

The accident occurred about 12:10 a. m. when St. John was returning from a business trip to Nahma. Traveling at a speed of from 30 to 35 miles an hour, the car struck the railroad tracks causing it to bound. Applying the brakes in negotiating the curve on River street, the car got out of control and smashed into the windows.

St. John was apprehended yesterday morning by Chief of Police John Peterson. The finish of the rear part of the car was quite badly damaged. Stock in the show windows, with the exception of a typewriter at Richards Bros., was not damaged.

A freak part of the mishap was that a plate glass window between the two which were smashed, was unbroken. It is believed that the front part of the car struck one of the windows causing the rear part of the car to swing around and hit the other on the far side.

The Oils got away to a flying start and were leading 15-3 at the close of the first quarter and still had a substantial lead at half time. With six minutes to go the Nortons tied the score, but the Oils flashed enough reserve strength to win by a good margin.

7 DECLAIMERS WIN IN CONTEST

Close Competition Necessitates Choosing Extra Candidate

The most successful declamatory contests held in the history of the local high school were given Thursday and Friday afternoons when thirteen students competed in the preliminaries. The contests were limited to members of the freshman and sophomore classes. Winners who will compete in the final elimination contest to be held here next Friday are Ruth Grosa, Adelaide Rosen, Geraldine Fouchard, Henrietta LaFoille, Shirley Orr, Roma Bergman, and Doris Mumford.

Interest and enthusiasm in the prelims exceeded all expectations. Both contests were held at 3:15 p. m., after school hours, and despite that fact, approximately 200 students were present although attendance was only voluntary.

Those in attendance were rewarded, however, by the excellent work of the declaimers and the closeness of the contests. On Thursday afternoon the judges, Principal R. H. Wilson, Miss Ida Stenstrom, and the student body, were unanimous in the selection of Ruth Grosa, Adelaide Rosen, and Geraldine Fouchard, from six candidates.

Contest Close

Friday's contest, however, resulted in so much difference of opinion among the judges that four declaimers instead of three as originally intended, were chosen out of the seven who competed. Each judge differed in the selection of the third candidate and the student vote on the two was so close that in fairness to the candidates, both had to be selected. The student vote was 103 for one and 102 for the other. Those chosen were Henrietta LaFoilee, Shirley Orr, Roma Bergman, and Doris Mumford.

Real competition is expected in the finals to be held Friday when the seven candidates will compete for the honor of representing Manistique high school in the sub-district declamatory contest which will be held here soon. No date has been announced as yet by Principal C. C. Strickland, of Gladstone, sub-district chairman, but it will be held not later than April 8.

Schools which will be eligible to compete here are Escanaba, Gladstone, Rapid River, St. Joseph, and Manistique.

Monday—Gophers vs. Badgers.

Thursday—No Game.

Friday—Tropans vs. Victors.

The Trojans increased their lead in the Lady Elks' Bowling league this week to two full games by taking two contests from the All Stars who at the time were tied for the runner-up position. All games last week resulted in clean sweeps with the Victors going into second place by virtue of victories over the Badgers. The Wolverines shoved the Gophers farther into the cellar by winning both games Thursday.

All teams with the exception of the Gophers are within striking distance of the leaders. Mrs. H. H. Hargreaves again took individual honors with a high single game count of 178.

HIAWATHA RACE WILL BE CLOSE

Many File for Posts in Primary Election; Last Day Tomorrow

With Monday the last day for candidates to file for office, the Hiawatha township political pot is beginning to boil in heated fashion. Petitions filed with Frank Beckman, township clerk, indicate a hotly contested primary election on Monday, March 14. The office held by Beckman is the only one uncontested thus far.

Candidates for the office of township supervisor, now held by Charles H. Howard, are Harry Blandford, Agner Dehlin, Ezra Aldrich, and Charles Howard. The race for highway commissioner also promises to be a hot one with three candidates, John Devroye, W. Wieland, and Enoch Hagquist, having filed petitions. The office is now held by John Devroye.

Edith Christensen, Robert Casemore, and Fred Burley are after the treasurership while Carl Linderoth, present incumbent, and Martin Johnson, have filed for the position of township overseer.

Justices of the peace for the upper end of the township include Edgar Lewis and Nile Byers. It is also rumored that three candidates from upper Hiawatha have filed for the post of overseer.

THEATRES

A scorching love scene played in total darkness is one of the unique features of "Mata Hari" in which Greta Garbo and Ramon Novarro are co-starred.

The scene was filmed without a light anywhere on the set, save for the glow of cigarettes puffed by Garbo and Novarro as they reclined upon a lounge. It is the arcs described in the blackness by the cigarette tips that reveals the sizzling action of the scene.

George Fitzmaurice, who directed the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature which will open today at the Gero Theatre, figured out this unusual treatment as a delicate method of presenting a scene unusually potent in romance.

Just A Mongrel But He Won For His Young Master

BY SADIE TRACY McGLYNN

There was something in the crisp air of winter that sent the blood rushing through Laddie's veins as he raced out across the lawn. It was his first voyage into a snow-covered world hitched to a sleigh. His young master, Jack Hawthorne, followed close behind him.

A big gray dog came up the street. He also trailed a sleigh on which rode a boy much bigger than Jack. Laddie soon learned that the boy's name was Eddy Conner, and that he was always boasting about his well-bred dog. Laddie ran playfully up to the gray dog, but he snarled and showed his teeth.

"That thing ain't no good for a sleigh dog. He's just a mongrel—a yellow dog." Laddie heard Eddy say.

"What do you know about it?" Jack snapped. "Wait till I get him trained."

Laddie had never heard Jack speak so crossly.

Then Eddy kicked at Laddie and ran off down the street with his dog. Laddie was sorry the snowballs Jack hurled after him did not go far enough.

"You have to beat that dog," Jack said in his ear as he knelt beside him—one arm around Laddie's neck, and as Laddie listened he wondered just how he would do that.

Throughout the days that followed much of Laddie's time was spent racing with his sleigh behind him in preparation for the event of the year that ranks next to the coming of Santa Claus—The Annual Dog Races.

Laddie was happy. It was little he dreamed that only the affection of his small friend kept him secure in his new home. For two long years Jack had waited for the dog he had been promised, and when he finally arrived, just a farefree yellow puppy with a ring of white around his neck and a patch of white on his face that gave him a glad look, it was a clear case of love at first sight.

The fact that no pedigree accompanied him to verify his claim to a long line of worthy ancestors would have soon sent him on his way, had it not been that the first lick of his little red tongue had begun a friendship that could never be replaced.

It became quite the usual thing for Laddie to go with Jack and his pals down to the river road. There the boys would take turns riding behind him on the sleigh. Then one day they went alone.

Down over the river bank Eddy Conner came slouching along, half running, half walking, followed by the big gray dog pulling his sleigh. In a few minutes a race was on, and though the big dog was much stronger than him, it was a short race and Laddie won.

Eddy rolled off the sleigh, his face sullen.

"We weren't trying our hardest," said he. "He'll beat that thing when the race comes off."

"Wait and see," Jack laughed. "We'll show you what he can do."

"He could eat that dog of yours," Eddy roared, towering over Jack in a threatening manner.

"He's ugly enough to do it, but it's a dog race, not a dog fight." Jack was not easily cowed.

Then Eddy set his dog on the unsuspecting Laddie.

A short scuffle, the bristling of hair; loud snarls, short barks, and the snapping of cruel white teeth.

Afterward Laddie could not remember just what all did happen in those few seconds. It was when he felt the gray dog's teeth biting into his pow that he relaxed his hold and fell back howling.

Eddy whistled to his dog and ran, but before he made the river bank Jack had overtaken him.

When Laddie hobbled up to them Jack's two small fists were beating at Eddy, but in a moment both boys went down on the ice together. Laddie ran back and forth on three legs barking loudly, as he saw the small body of his pal wriggling and twisting underneath Eddy. He came closer. His barks were threatening, and he added an occasional growl. Should he bite the big bully? He jumped out of the way as they rolled over, then ran toward them again, snarling viciously.

Eddy jumped to his feet and ran.

Laddie licked the tears from Jack's face as Jack examined his sore paw.

"Never mind," Jack wept aloud, "we'll get it better somehow, and we'll show him what a yellow dog can do."

Laddie left very helpless as he hobbled toward the house on three legs. Later a kindly man came and dressed his paw for him. Jack held his head so that it would not hurt so much.

After school Jack stayed at home with him, often whispering in his ear about the race that was coming soon. Sometimes he cried a little when he took the bandage off Laddie's foot to see if it was any better.

Laddie soon grew impatient to get outside. One night when everyone was in bed he succeeded in getting the big smelling thing off his paw. For a long time he lay licking the sore, but in the morning he was mildly scolded and the bandage replaced. At the end of the third night of tending it himself, however, it was quite well again.

Soon the sore paw was forgotten, but his dislike for the gray dog was to remain long in his memory.

Then came the great day of the race. Laddie was restless as he stood waiting for it to begin. He felt that it was a big day. His ears stood erect on his broad head, and he twisted about in his harness. Occasionally he barked.

One by one the other boys arrived with their dogs.

There were two yellow collies, and one black one with a snowy white breast. Thoroughbreds they were. It showed plainly in their long pointed noses, and their bodies so well shaped. Next came a husky. Perhaps he had come all the way from the Northland. Laddie looked up into Jack's face, smiling as only a dog can smile. Jack patted his head. He had the nicest dog there. The husky's face looked dirty with those black hairs sticking out. He looked cross and unhappy. He wouldn't be the pal Laddie was. He glanced at the other two dogs. One of them looked too fat to run very fast.

The hair along Laddie's back stood straight and stiff as the gray appeared. He growled, then whined a bit as he felt Jack take a firm hold on his collar. A whistle blew and the dogs began to line up. The gray stood at one end of the line. Laddie went with Jack and took his place beside Eddy Conner's dog. Again the whistle blew. They were off. Seven bounding fur clad racers, urged on by seven shouting boys. Their sleds flew over the snow, that scrunched beneath them as they went.

Laddie felt the crisp air beating against his face. Head up, ears back, his long legs stretching out beneath him he struck out with lightning swiftness. Beside him bounded the dog that he must beat. The big boy he did not like rode with him.

"Attaboy. Attaboy," came through the air. Laddie's feet flew over the snow as he shot out ahead. On, on, the road stretched far before him; behind him panted the gray. Faster still he went until the sound died from his ears. For a time he forgot the other dogs in the sheer joy of running, but the race was long—too long—not like the short ones that he loved, but a continual grinding down of his strength. His throat grew hot, and a pounding noise set up in his ears that made the scrunching of the sled sound far away. A little further and his muscles were growing numb. He tried so hard to go faster, but his bounds were falling short. He was tired. His breath came in short pants. Not far away was the line.

On his face and around his eyes white frost had gathered. The sun came suddenly from behind a cloud, shining upon the snow with almost blinding brightness. On his right something black shot out ahead of him. It must be the gray dog.

"Come on, Laddie, come on." The words carried a caressing sound to his dull ears. "You'll make it. Attaboy."

He fought the air through his swollen throat. His neck stretched till it hurt, but the thing kept on. Right over the line ahead of him it went. A whistle blew. Jack pulled him to a halt. He fell back on his haunches. His head hung low. Two arms went around his neck, hugging him, and pulling him out of the way of another dog that came panting in. It was the gray. Ahead of him on the snow ran a long black shadow. Laddie knew then that he had beaten the gray dog; that the black thing he saw ahead of him was his own shadow. He looked up and saw Jack laughing through the tears that filled his eyes.

Crowds surged around him. They patted the dog. They praised him.

A man with a pencil and a note book in his hand pushed in beside them.

"What's your name?" he asked.

"Jack Hawthorne," came the answer.

"What kind of a dog is that?"

Jack looked puzzled for a moment, then smiled proudly.

"Just a yellow dog," he replied as he patted the well-shaped head.

The Rotary Aces marched right through the Deep Rocks Friday night to take two out of three in a make-up match. Tear gas, from a bomb exploded by a playful member of the Deep Rock team did not help the scores much.

WAR METHODS IN LEGION'S DRIVE

Every Person To Be Asked To Aid In Business Revival

Cooperation of every individual, every firm and every civic organization is being sought by the American Legion in its drive to provide employment for men and to stimulate Gladstone business as its contribution toward a nation-wide revival of trade. Through publicity, through personal solicitation and through church and club announcements the program is to be called to the attention of each person in the community.

The plan incorporates many of the phases of the old war-time drives in which every person was sold on the idea that he must contribute his part in carrying the nation through a crisis. Fostered by the organization which grew out of the war, the plan is founded on the principles of unselfish service which carried these same men to the trenches of France and to the mobilization points within our own borders.

The first act of the committee is the solicitation of pledges from the people of Gladstone to provide work by making improvements, alterations, repairs and replacements that have been planned for the future without further delay. If each individual in the community will do this, it is pointed out, the unemployment situation will be solved immediately.

"It must be remembered," a member of the committee stated yesterday, "that no revival of business or trade will come until every person makes it his duty to share a part of the burden that must be borne before revival comes. United action will turn the wheel and it is possible that the little pressure that might be brought by the numerous small repair jobs will be sufficient to get the vehicle of prosperity under way. As soon as it has started to move it will gain momentum and everyone will share in the benefits.

"Waiting for the other fellow to act," he continued, "has been the course of action so far pursued by many. If everyone waits, indefinitely for revival to come from an outside source conditions will never get better. We must assume that the problem is our problem and that the things that we do are the things that are needed to better conditions."

The committee urges early signing of the pledges to have work done. No matter how small the job may be or how large, the committee advises, the pledges should be sent in to headquarters. It is the aggregate of work that will make the plan successful and not only the large projects that will be undertaken, the committee points out. One hundred jobs of one day each will give work to 20 men for a full 5 day week.

THEATRES

RIALTO

No greater tribute can be paid to the romantic theme of "She Wanted A Millionaire," the Fox photoplay which marks the first screen appearance of 1932 of Joan Bennett and which opens today at the Rialto Theatre than the fact that five members of its cast were caught in the web of cupid during the making of the picture.

In the picture Miss Bennett marries James Kirkwood and as the film ends she is shown preparing to marry her co-star Spencer Tracy. At the same time that she was portraying these screen romances Miss Bennett was enacting a real life romance and before the completion of the picture she announced her engagement to Gene Markey, the writer.

James Kirkwood, too, had an affair of the heart, and returned to the studio one day with a new bride, Miss Beatrice Powers, the young lady you will see in the beauty contest sequence of the picture as Miss Germany.

Donald Dillaway, who plays an important role in the picture, announced his engagement to Dorothy Jordan, and not to be outdone by her fellow players, Una Merkel, the delightful star who has popularized the southern accent on the screen, spent a whole morning introducing her new husband, Ronald L. Burla, aviation engineer, to the various members of the cast.

Mrs. Gust Settergren, Manistique, visited at the Louis Skogquist home Friday enroute to her home after visiting for the past week with her daughters in Chicago.

Working Gladstone Men Means Working Dollars!

"When will general business conditions take a turn for the better? THAT question is uppermost in the mind of every citizen, and because it IS the topic of discussion wherever two or more citizens foregather, many and varied are the plans and suggestions offered for bringing about an improvement in the present situation. One salient fact, however, has dominated practically every suggested solution of the problem. . . the fact that MEN MUST BE PROVIDED WITH WORK before ANY lasting improvement can be assured—before business can possibly take that very much to be desired 'turn for the better.'

YOU can (and certainly you should) do YOUR share toward bringing idle dollars and idle men together. You can help yourself and at the same time help the other fellow. There is, about your home and its grounds, about your factory, store or office, at this very moment some bit of WORK that you have fully intended having done. A job that you have been putting off and yet a job that ABSOLUTELY MUST BE TAKEN CARE OF SOONER OR LATER. There are several good reasons why you should ORDER THAT WORK NOW.

In the first place it will improve your property, then for purely selfish reasons you should order that work NOW while the prices of both labor and materials are at their present low levels, because you will save money by so doing. The present unemployment situation is hurting you along with every other citizen. Since the WORK must be done eventually, why not order it done NOW when it will help to solve the problem of the unemployed—Sign the accompanying pledge—HELP YOURSELF BY HELPING THE OTHER FELLOW.

BY JOHN L. COOLEY
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—A week of swift changes came to a close on the Stock market today with prices tapering off in a mild flurry of pre-holiday selling.

Demand from the shorts manifested none of the urgency that gave the list its push at yesterday's opening. Instead, quotations in some instances gave evidence of a thin market whose technical position had been impaired by substantial covering. Closing prices averaged about a point and a half lower. Sales totaled 704,690 shares, much less than a third of last Saturday's volume.

Stocks in which covering had been most vigorous were heavy. U. S. Steel finished 2 points off at 48½, which was also half a point under the close of the previous week-end. American Telephone reacted below 130 for a net drop of 3 3-8. Auburn tumbled swiftly, down 10 net. Santa Fe yielded 4½, Union Pacific 2 5-8, American Can 2½, Allied Chemical 2¼, and Case, Woolworth, American Tobacco "BB," New York Central, Southern Pacific and Westinghouse about a point each.

Two automobile companies, Hudson and Reo, omitted dividends. Studebaker surprised the financial district by announcing higher prices after March 1.

Steel mill operations next week will be at a lower rate of activity. Youngstown district plants begin 8 points lower at 27 per cent of capacity and the average for the country is expected to show some recession. There has been some increase in rail tonnage, but this demand is spotty and limited to immediate requirements.

Curb Sags Slowly In Quiet Trading

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—The Curb market sagged slowly in quiet week-end trading today, thereby offering a sharp contrast to the fireworks that appeared in last Saturday's short session.

Utilities had a somewhat easy undertone.

Nominal losses were suffered by Niagara Hudson, Middle West Utilities, Brazilian Traction and United Light "A," but trading in the light and power company equities comprised a large proportion of the day's turnover which was about 120,000 shares.

Cord Corp. reacted nearly a point, reflecting Auburn's weakness on the big board. Philip Morris was active and firm, while Ford of Canada "A" moved up 3-8. Stromberg Carlson also rallied. New Jersey Zinc, American Manufacturing and Aluminum of America showed moderate heaviness.

CHICAGO PRICES

CHICAGO LARD

Chicago, Feb. 20—Lard, $4.70.

CHICAGO EGGS

Chicago, Feb. 20—Eggs 7,297, easy; extra firsts, 14½; fresh graded firsts, 14; current receipts, 13½.

CHICAGO POTATOES

Chicago, Feb. 20—Potatoes 49, on track 194, total U. S. shipments 724; about steady, trading slow; sacked per cwt.: Wisconsin rurals, 80 to 85; Idaho russets, No. 1, 1.35 to 1.45; No. 2, 1.00 to 1.05.

CHICAGO BUTTER

Chicago, Feb. 20—Butter prices were unchanged today and trade was light:

Fresh: 93 score, 22½ to 23; 92, 22; 91, 21 3-4; 90, 21½; 89, 21; 88, 20½; 87, 20.

Centralized carlots: 90 score, 21 3-4; 89, 21¼; 88, 20½.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Feb. 20—Grain values tumbled today.

Wheat closed unsettled, ½ to 7-8 under yesterday's finish, corn ½ to 3-4 down, oats 1-8 to 3-8 off, and provisions unchanged to 5 cents lower.

Accentuating bearish sentiment as to grains were downturns in securities at New York and in wheat quotations at Liverpool. Pre-holiday adjustment of accounts for recent buyers of wheat was also a weight on the market, together with apparent likelihood that an Alaskan cold wave was petering out.

Heavier offerings of corn to arrive led to selling pressure on feed grains. Eastern shipping inquiry for corn remained slack.

Provisions showed a downward trend with cereals and as the result of selling by warehouses and packers.

Closing indemnities: Wheat—May, 60 1-8, 63¼ to 3-8; July, 61 3-8 to ½, 64½ to 5-8; September, 63¼, 66 5-8. Corn—May, 39½ to 5-8, 40 3-4; July, 41 7-8, 43¼.

CHICAGO LIVESTOCK

Sheep 5,000; today's market nominal; for week ending Friday 100 doubles from feeding stations, 2,600 direct; killing classes 25 to 50 higher; fat lambs showing maximum advance; closing market again turned bullish under active local buying regaining earlier 6.85 top; closing bulks follow: Better grade lambs, 6.25 to 6.60; few, 6.75 to 6.85; choice 96 lb. weights, 6.50; medium offerings, including few loads suitable for feeding purposes, 5.25 to 5.75 to killers; throwouts 4.50 to 5.00; fat ewes, 3.00 to 3.75; clipped lambs earlier in week, 5.50 to 6.00.

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—Holiday indifference today pervaded the Bond market and prices generally showed little inclination to move in either direction.

The dullness of the trading was shown by the fact that sales totaled only $4,704,000, the smallest aggregate in several weeks. The average for 60 corporate securities closed at exactly the same figure as yesterday.

The United States government list, which for the past week or so has been climbing to higher levels, indulged in a mild reaction. Dealers attributed this to profit taking which, they said, was no more than natural inasmuch as several of the treasury loans had registered gains of around 5 points.

Much of the recent buying in the federal section is understood to have been by banks. The previous weakness of governments was also blamed on the same source.

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—Wall Street, meaning by that term, the banks, security and commodity exchanges, will transact no business on Monday, Washington's birthday. Since it is a national holiday the suspension of business by banks and exchanges will be fairly general throughout the nation, although the Chicago Livestock Exchange will operate.

The new $5 par common stock of the Electric Bond & Share Co. has been admitted to trading on the New York Curb Exchange on a "when issued" basis. This stock will be issued for the present shares on the basis of one share of the new for three of the old, if stockholders approve of the proposal.

Harold Smith, a vice president of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., has been elected a director of the Radio Corporation of America, succeeding the late H. P. Davis.

Due to active sales campaigns by the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and the Western Union Telegraph Co. more than 12,000 new users of teletype machines have been signed up in the last three months, it was reported in Wall Street today. American Tel. & Tel. is said to have approximately 2,800 instruments in service, against about 11,500 for Western Union and Postal Telegraph. The telegraph companies are working on a reciprocal basis in the operation of their instruments.

THE LIFE OF PRESIDENT HINDENBURG

him. The voters will now decide.

Who is this grim and rugged old man who sits in the presidential palace at Berlin in the shadows of his 84 years?

He is, undoubtedly, the greatest "dug-out" in recorded annals, that being the phrase the English use to designate an army officer who has returned from retirement to win fame.

When Hindenburg was past 60 he retired from the German army and settled at Hanover. When nearly 70 he was "dug out" by the ex-kaiser and made field marshal of all the German armies after he had beat the Russians to a pulp on the eastern front. When he was nearing 80, he was "dug out" from his second retirement to become president of the republic.

Though never any special admirer of Kaiser Wilhelm, he gave the best and most devoted service of any of his generals. He proved himself a hero by leading Germany's battered armies back home after the war was lost and the kaiser had run away to Holland.

All his life a monarchist, the world expected him to be a mere chair-warmer for the monarchist crowd when he was elected president. Hindenburg didn't. He took his oath to the republic and he has stuck to it with a fidelity that is beyond question.

And what sort of a human being is this old President Paul von Hindenburg of Germany?

He is built on a big scale—big body, with a big head, which looks as if it had been rough hewn from granite.

In the presidential palace he sets Germans an example of frugal living and hard work.

He arises usually between seven and eight and immediately after breakfast takes a walk in the big garden.

Promptly at 9:30 he begins the day's work by receiving his personal state secretary, Dr. Meissner, and getting reports of all governmental activities. He is thus busy until he eats lunch at 1:30. Usually a few old friends are present as guests.

After lunch, he takes a short nap, works all afternoon and then has his dinner at 7:30 after another walk in his garden.

In the evening, he reads state documents or entertains a few friends. Promptly at 11 o'clock he goes to bed.

Only once since he has been president has he remained up later than that. He attended a parliamentary beer evening and got to swapping yarns with Otto Braun, the Socialist minister-president of the state of Prussia. Both Hindenburg and Otto Braun are mighty hunters.

One can imagine the scene:

"Tja, Excellenz, das war ausserordentlich," says Braun, puffing at his pipe, the while the president takes a sip of beer.

And so it goes on until Hindenburg sees the troubled glances of his entourage and looks at his watch. It is 3 a. m.

He possesses Napoleon's faculty of sleeping at odd moments, even in times of greatest stress and strain.

Old army officers like to tell of trips Hindenburg took in his train on tours of inspection at the front.

"Now let us spend a few minutes thinking about our job," he would say.

In three seconds he would be asleep.

"An odd-looking object stands conspicuously on his big desk. It came to him from his father and is one of his most precious possessions. It is simply a piece of faded gilt cardboard, framed in plain wood. On it are printed:

"Ora et labora."

("Work and Pray.)

Hindenburg does both.

He is a terror for his stenographers and secretaries for the old man is a stickler about punctuation. Anybody who is guilty of careless commas or faulty construction will hear of it.

When typewritten manuscripts are brought in to him for his signature, he goes over them with a fine tooth comb, puts the commas in the right places and inserts the full stops, if these have been neglected.

He explains that once a battle was lost through the wrong insertion of a comma in the operation orders.

He is a bit old-fashioned about modern inventions. It took him years to get accustomed to using the telephone.

His backers had a time with him during his first presidential campaign getting him to agree to broadcast. He growled, but they finally got him before the "mike" and the old man made quite a speech. So much so that the announcer, completely absorbed in what he was hearing, forgot to throw off the switch when the speech was ended. The result was the vast German public heard the old man mutter:

"Well, thank God, that's over!"

He would be the despair of an American presidential campaign manager. Some pompous fellow will come to see him on some mission connected with the election, will be ushered into Hindenburg's study, espy a painting of the great soldier Von Moltke and point to it, saying:

"Ah Excellence, by Lenbach, is it not?"

"What the devil," the old man will growl, "you surely did not come all the way here to talk to me about my paintings!"

But if the visitor comes right to the point and explains his mission, then the old fellow himself may suggest a trip around the house and, acting as guide, will show all his swords, banners and mementoes.

He has a prodigious memory for names and faces. It is an old trick with royalties, when they go on tour, to have their memories furnished them ready-made. A secretary will look up a card index and will approach royalty:

"Your Royal Highness, we are coming to Glogau. Seven years ago you met Heinrich Schmitz there at a bier-abend. He is an important man in the district. He is a big fellow with yellowish hair and light brown beard."

And, of course, His Royal Highness picks out Schmitz and "remembers" everything.

But this sort of fake is not necessary with Hindenburg. It is said that he really remembers thousands of his former comrades, recognizes them at sight.

During the World War many fanciful tales about the old man arose. Perhaps one of the best, which is said to be genuine and which is often told by Hindenburg himself, is this:

In his campaign in East Prussia in the first year of the war—when his picture was not so well known—he won a big victory at Insterburg. A year later—on Sept. 11, 1915—he was on his way to inspect the front and his auto was headed for the road that leads right through Insterburg. But he found it barred by the local police. His chauffeur was told he could not drive through. When Hindenburg leaned out and asked why, he got his answer:

"Because a service of thanksgiving is being held in the market place in celebration of the first anniversary of the liberation of the town by our great General Hindenburg, that's why. And that ought to be sufficient answer to you. Get along!"

Hindenburg got along—chuckling.

TOMORROW: A boy with 800 years of recorded ancestry behind him who entered the German army at 16—and remained a soldier for 70 years. . . The birth of the empire, which he attended at Versailles; its death in the ashes of the World War, when another emperor deserted him and his beaten armies in the field and ran away to safety in Holland.

Championship Hinges on Tuesday's Cage Battle

ESKYMOS FACE MOUNTAINEERS

Record Crowd Certain; Last League Game Of Season

Peninsula sportdom will turn to Escanaba on Tuesday evening as the Eskymo and Mountaineer basketball teams square off in a game that will return the first champions of the newly organized Class B conference. Iron Mountain reports at least two hundred fans will come here from that city and has already requested that many reserved seats be held for their crowd.

Coach Lars Thune of the Mountaineers was in Escanaba yesterday and expressed belief that the game will be a close one and hard fought throughout. Thune looked over the new junior high school gymnasium where the game will be played.

Iron Mountain now is in first place in the conference standings with the Eskymos in second place, trailing by a half game. An Escanaba victory would put the Eskymos in first place and give them the championship while an Escanaba defeat would send the Nordberg cagers toppling to third place. Negaunee with its conference season completed is tied with Escanaba for second place now.

The standings as they are now follow:

	W.	L.	Pts.	O.P.	Pct.
Iron Mt.	5	1	172	81	.833
Escanaba	5	2	175	135	.714
Negaunee	5	2	147	138	.714
Soo	5	4	217	166	.556
Ishpeming	4	4	157	160	.500
Marquette	3	5	156	197	.375
Menominee	1	5	69	181	.167
Kingsford	0	2	29	63	.000
Manistique	0	3	55	68	.000

By defeating Iron Mountain, Escanaba's record would be six victories and two defeats for a percentage of .750 with Iron Mountain's record five victories and two defeats for a percentage of .714.

An Escanaba defeat would make the Eskymos' record 5 wins, three defeats, a percentage of .625. All other schools in the conference have completed their conference games with the exception of the Eskymos and Mountaineers.

On the basis of comparative scores the teams apparently are evenly matched. Both schools walloped Menominee twice. Iron Mountain lost to Ishpeming at Ishpeming and Escanaba defeated Ishpeming at Escanaba by two points. Figuring that a team has a few points advantage on their home court, this would balance the teams once more.

However, Iron Mountain won from Norway while Escanaba took an unmerciful lacing from the Vikings. On the strength of that because the Mountaineers defeated the fast traveling Ironwood bunch, Iron Mountain probably will get the better end of the odds.

Two officials will handle the game. Bud Finch of Marquette has already been chosen as one of the officials. The other official has not yet been selected but both schools favor Eddie Chambers for the job so if the former Wolverine star can be secured he will probably get the call.

MacFarlane Wins From Bill Mehlhorn

Palma Ceia Golf Club, Tampa, Fla., Feb. 20 (AP)—Willie MacFarlane, the canny Scot from Tuckahoe, N. Y., slipped into the final round of the $4,000 Gasparilla open golf tournament here today by defeating Wild Bill Mehlhorn of New York, one up, in a thrilling 18-hole match.

His opponent tomorrow for the tournament's top prize of $925 will be youthful Paul Runyan of Port Chester, N. Y., who defeated the veteran Tony Manero in the other semi-final match, 2 and 1.

MacFarlane went to the semi-finals by defeating Ed Schultz of Troy, N. Y., 5 and 4. Runyan beat Ray Mangrum of Los Angeles, one up, in twenty holes.

In the other quarter finals, Walter Hagen of Detroit, Mich., was eliminated by Manero one up, largely because Manero carded a 33, two strokes under par, for the outgoing nine. Mehlhorn defeated young Dick Metz of San Angelo, Texas, co-medalist with MacFarlane, 4 and 3.

North Town Pucksters Oppose Mountaineer Team Again

With the Escanaba Rangers out of town, the Hawks, North Town's pride, will hold the interest of hockey fans today when they play the Iron Mountain Eagles in the third game of their series at the North Escanaba rink. The game will start at 3 o'clock.

The rink is in excellent shape for the game, Manager Swanson reported last evening and indicated that a speedy spectacle was in store for the faithful.

The mining school pucksters had little difficulty winning from the Gladstone-Kipling sextet at Gladstone yesterday, 12 to 3, in the feature of the Legion winter carnival there.

NORWAY FLASH GRABS HONORS

Ivar Ballangrud Winner Of 1500 and 10,000 Meter Races

Lake Placid, N. Y., Feb. 20 (AP)—Capturing the last two races on the program, Ivar Ballangrud won the world's speed skating championship for Norway today.

The 27 year old native of Hadeland, near Oslo, who had won the 5,000 meters title yesterday, added the 1500 and 10,000 meters crowns today and won the individual world's championship with the low point total of 199.26. He succeeds Clas Turnburg of Finland who did not defend his title this year.

Ballangrud's double triumph today gave Norway a clean sweep of the four races on the world championship program, Ballangrud accounting for the 1500, 5,000 and 10,000 meters and Haakon Pedersen for the 500.

Beats Shea's Time

The Norwegian ace won the 1500 meters in the good time of 2:24 8-10, more than 32 seconds faster than Jack Shea's winning Olympic time of 2:57 5-10, but far behind Thurnburg's world's record of 2:17 4-10. A full second behind the champion today came Michael Staksrud, also of Norway, who was caught in 2:25 8-10. Bert Taylor of New York won third place for the United States in 2:26 4-10.

Ballangrud dethroned the Finn, Ossian Blomquist, in the 10,000 meters which he skated in 17:58. Taylor and Bernt Evensen of Norway tied for second at 18:05 4-10 with Staksrud fourth and Blomquist fifth.

In the final point totals, Staksrud ranked below Ballangrud with 200.47 points, with Evensen third with 201.67; Taylor fourth, 202.47; and Blomquist fifth, 202.55.

Arizona Cage Men Enjoy Snow Fight

Albuquerque, N. M., Feb. 20 (AP)—A snowfall here proved such a novelty to members of the University of Arizona basketball team today that they engaged in a snowball fight on one of the downtown streets.

Whereupon two policemen, fearing for the safety of pedestrians and passing motor cars, intervened and took the team to the police station for a lecture.

Several of the players said they had not seen snow for years. The group was released. The team is here for games with the University of New Mexico Lobos.

Purdue Now Leads Big Ten Basketball

LaFayette, Ind., Feb. 20. (AP)—Purdue jumped into the lead in the race for the basketball championship of the Western conference here tonight by defeating Northwestern's Wildcats, 48 to 33.

The Boilermakers' victory gave them six victories and one defeat, bettering Northwestern's percentage of seven triumphs and two defeats.

Leading 23 to 18 at the end of the first half, Purdue went on a scoring spree in the last period to pile up the comfortable margin.

Wooden, flashy floor guard, led the Purdue attack with 15 points.

HIS ERROR

Los Angeles—A valuable tip to husbands: When your wife wears size "34" undies, don't come home with size "38" in your pocket Peter F. Gray, Jr., happened to pull that blunder here and his wife, Mrs. Martha R. Gray, sued him for divorce. The judge granted her petition.

HOUGHTON TECH EASY WINNER

Gladstone-Kipling Puck Chasers Defeated By 12-3

Gladstone, Feb. 20 (Special)—The Michigan Tech hockey team beat the Gladstone-Kipling team by a score of 12 to 3 in the wind-up of a program of winter sports here this afternoon. Superior teamplay on the part of the more experienced players from Houghton held the local aggregation scoreless until the final period in a game replete with thrills for the crowd of well over a thousand spectators, many of whom had never witnessed an exhibition of this fastest of sports.

Redman, one of the Tech spares, captured the scoring by outwitting Lucier, Gladstone goalie, to the tune of three goals. Gladstone's scoring in the last period was by VanDeWeghe, King and Bovin, each scoring once. The work of Haskins on defense was outstanding.

Following the game U. J. Noblet, coach of the mining students, said that the locals possessed some fine material but lacked organization and experience.

The lineups and summary:

GLADSTONE	Pos.	MICH. TECH
Lucier	Goalie	Hurley
Nylund	R. D.	Weber
Haskins	L. D.	Newett
VanDeWeghe	C.	Jacobson

NEW RULES AID TO PREP TEAMS

Decrease of Injuries in High School Games Expected

BY ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, Feb. 20 (AP)—Chief among the benefits of the revised national football rules will be the safeguards they provide for the high school and prep school players, in the belief of leaders who have studied the far-reaching changes adopted by the national rules committee.

As one of the principal advocates of alerations following the heavy toll taken among youthful players last season, Edward J. Storey, former president of the New York State Interscholastic Association of Physical Educators, today placed his unqualified stamp of approval on the new rules.

Most of the six salient rules changes, particularly the section curbing aggressive use of hands on the head by the defense, were in accord with proposals urged by Storey.

"High school leaders in New York state feel that the national rules committee has done an excellent and thorough job in revising the rules to make football safer for the vast army of boys playing it throughout the country," Storey told the Associated Press. "The high schools, as well as the colleges, will accept and approve them.

"I am convinced the new regulations as to equipment, the abolishment of the flying tackle and rolling block, the 'dead ball' rule and the curb on dangerous use of hands, with a stiff penalty for violators, will do more than anything in years to decrease the number of injuries in high school games."

ILLINOIS BEATS MICHIGAN FIVE

Wolverines Fall Before Hellmich and His Colleagues

Champaign, Ill., Feb. 20 (AP)—Led by Lanky Hudson Hellmich, Illinois just about wrecked Michigan's chances of sharing in the western conference basketball title, by defeating the Wolverines, 29 to 23.

Hellmich cracked in eight field goals, four in each period, and his defensive work helped to spoil Wolverine shots. Illinois led through the contest, except at the end of the first period when Michigan had a 12 to 11 edge.

The defeat was Michigan's third in eight games, while the victory gave Illinois the same standing as the Wolverines.

115 NOMINEES FOR BIG DERBY

Top Flight Favorite on Winter Books to Cop Race

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 20 (AP)—Unbeaten in seven starts as a 2-year-old, C. V. Whitney's sensational filly, Top Flight, reigns supreme among the 115 nominees for the Kentucky Derby—this despite the fact that only one of her sex has ever won the rich bluegrass classic since its inaugural 57 years ago.

It was in 1915 that Regret established the precedent. And it was this same house of Whitney which produced the filly that accomplished what only eighteen others have dared to try in the long history of the race.

This year's nominations for the derby, to be run May 7, make up the smallest subscription list since 1923, when only 92 were nominated. Notwithstanding this, however, almost every notable three-year-old in the country is represented. The outstanding absenters are Hygro and Fall Apple.

Bradley Represented

Despite a brilliant 2-year-old record, late fall racing indicated the former's racing powers are limited, while it appears the Whitney clan, well-represented in the derby with six eligibles, intends to reserve Fall Apple for the Preakness.

Of this year's nominees, 32 have yet to earn brackets, and fourteen of these have never faced the barrier. The remainder, in 1,102 essays, accounted for 236 firsts, 150 seconds and 143 thirds as juveniles, to amass a grand total of $798,903 in actual earnings.

While top flight stands shoulder above the other nominees as a winter favorite, Tick On, owned by the Loma stable of Mrs. L. G. Kaufman, and Burning Blaze, owned by P. A. and R. J. Nash, of Chicago, are next in line.

Col. Edward R. Bradley, whose colors finished one-two in 1922 and again in 1926, has nominated Brother Joe, Burgoo King, Bubble Up, Battering Ram and Bertjohn. Of these Burgoo King rates as the most promising.

Mrs. Payne Whitney, whose Twenty Grand shattered a track record of seventeen years to win last year's derby, is represented by six eligibles, the largest number of any stable. Notable among these is Semaphore, who demonstrated his ability in finishing second in the Queen City handicap.

ESCANABA JOINS NATIONAL DRIVE

Campaign Starts to Bring Together Idle Men And Idle Dollars

During the coming week machinery will be set in motion for Escanaba's "war against depression" drive, sponsored by the American Legion and backed by clubs and civic organizations. Actual solicitation, in which the whole city will be covered in a campaign to bring together the idle dollar and the idle man, will start Feb. 29, according to Tom Beaton, general chairman of the Legion committee.

The campaign is based upon the fundamental facts that dollars properly spent now will bring unusual value returns in material and labor. Also, the more dollars spent in work, the less dollars will be necessary for direct relief, with its attendant moral degeneration.

Officials Cooperate.

It is not the intention of the American Legion and the Escanaba civic committees to in any way attempt any kind of contract work, or to interest themselves in the placement of any individual worker. What the Legion proposes to do is to assemble at one central point, information as to all building repair, maintenance or new construction work that is necessary or advisable.

Lists of unemployed already compiled are available for the use of the committee, and selecting the worker for the job will be the easiest part of the task. City and county employment workers have pledged support in the campaign, and it is planned to make the campaign a county-wide affair.

Material, Labor Cheap

The drive is to be participated in by everyone, and is not intended as a Legion project only. For that reason, representatives of various civic organizations have been called in or have volunteered to serve on committees.

During the coming week, details of the campaign will be laid before clubs, lodges and other gatherings, including church congregations. Beginning with the week of Feb. 29, volunteer workers will cover the city, making a survey of premises and a detailed inspection of buildings. Where needed improvements or repairs are noted, the owner will be shown how he can save money by doing it at the present time. In cases where the owner signifies his intention of making future alterations or additions or new construction, the workers will point out the desirability of having such work done as soon as possible, with a resulting economy in material and labor.

Heater, Bedding Needed at Once for Poor Family

While out on an official call Saturday, Delta county officers chanced upon one of the most poignant cases of want and privation they have ever seen. A father and mother and four small children were living in a shack through which the wind blew and the snow sifted through cracks. They had no beds, little bedding, and were sleeping on the floor. A tin can served as a stove. The father was searching for work which he was unable to find, and there was but little food in the house. Some of the children were barefooted, and all lacked clothing.

Realizing the need for immediate relief, the officers arranged for the rental of a house which would serve as a better protection from the winter winds. Wood is available, but a stove is needed, and an appeal is being made for a heater, two beds, mattresses and bedding. Anyone having any of these articles to spare is asked to call the Delta county sheriff's department immediately, as the family will suffer acutely if they are not given the means of keeping warm. The articles will be called for and delivered.

WASHINGTON
BI·CENTENNIAL

This year, throughout the world, men who love liberty pay homage to our great American, George Washington. With infinite gratitude and reverence we observe the two hundredth anniversary of his birth.

We pause to remember the military genius that made possible our Independence; the leadership that made possible our Union; the wisdom that made possible our Constitution; the glorious statesmanship that made possible our Republic.

We sing praises of the man whose principles of government were conceived with such vision that they survive today to serve a nation of more than a hundred million people.

Hushed, we listen to the words of Abraham Lincoln: "Washington's is the mightiest name of earth—long since mightiest in the cause of civil liberty; still mightiest in moral reformation. On that name no eulogy is expected. It cannot be. To add brightness to the sun, or glory to the name of Washington, is alike impossible. Let none attempt it. In solemn awe we pronounce the name, and in its naked deathless splendor leave it shining on."
